Carter Heading For Middle East

Oil Companies 'Exploiting' Unstable Market

Times News Services

Western oil companies are being accused by Middle East countries of profiting from the unstable world oil market caused by the Iranian revolution.

Ali Jaidah, Qatar's chief delegate to the Arab energy conference here, joined Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates today in saying: "The oil companies are definitely making hefty profits. We are definitely unhappy about the situation.

"It is about time the situation was rectified."

UAE Petroleum Minister Mana al-Oteiba accused oil companies Sunday of "ugly exploitation" of the market situation caused by the political upheaval in Iran and said he would suggest they be blacklisted if they persisted.

Kuwait's oil minister, Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, supported this position and urged the oil companies to heed the warning.

Jaidah said the industrialized countries should check the companies which are reaping windfall profits.

Oil officials in Abu Dhabi said OPEC might consider eliminating oil companies as middle men and sign direct contracts with governments.

The officials added that oil companies were taking advantage of high spot market prices to sell oil bought in the Persian Gulf under OPEC contracts at sharply higher prices, these officials said.

Iran resumed oil exports today for the first time in three months.

A spokesman for the National Iranian Oil Co. said the tanker World Ambassador started loading 110,000 tons of light crude and 140,000 tons of heavy crude for the Mitsui Trading Co. of Japan at the Kharg Island terminal in the Persian Gulf.

It is the first shipment of crude oil for export since December when the oil industry's 65,000 workers went on srike.

Another tanker was scheduled to arrive at Kharg Island on Wednesday to load crude for Ashland Oil, an U.S. company.

The new government has said it will not restore the previous export level of 5.4 million barrels a day because it wants to conserve the oil reserves for the future.

Road Crashes Take 3 Lives

Three Greater Victoria residents were killed and four other people were hospitalized in two separate traffic accidents over the weekend.

At 2 p.m. Saturday Eduardo De Amaral, 19, of 866 Carey Rd., and Sheryl Kowalchuk, 17, of 1135 Bute, View Royal, died in a two car collision on the Malahat.

The accident occured near the summit about 32 kilometres north of Victoria.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the car carrying the two youths skidded out of control on the wet pavement and collided with a south-bound pick-up truck.

The driver of the truck was hospitalized. His name is not being released by police.

In another crash at about midnight Sunday a 33-year-old Victoria man was killed, his wife and two others were hospitalized when three cars collided on the Pat Bay highway near Elk Lake.

Saanich police today declined to release the names of any of those involved in the crash, pending notification of next of kin.

Police said the wife of the man who was fatally injured is under emergency care and has not yet been told of her husband's death.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will fly to the Middle East on Wednesday in an effort to salvage the negotiations for a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, the White House announced today.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said Carter will arrive in Egypt on Thursday afternoon for talks with President Anwar Sadat and will procede to Israel on Saturday evening for talks with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

A U.S. official who asked not to be identified said that at this point there are no plans for a three-way meeting among the leaders. The official said he does not know when Carter will return to the United States.

The announcement of the trip came shortly after Begin told Carter at a surprise White House meeting that the Israeli cabinet had responded positively to U.S. suggestions for resolving some of the remaining obstacles to the peace treaty.

The announcement of Carter's travel plans said his talks in Egypt and Israel "will focus on the peace process, regional security and bilateral issues."

The U.S. official said Carter believes his travels will "offer the best hope for success" in his months-long effort to promote an Israeli-Egyptian agreement.

The White House announcement said:

"The president believes that we must not allow the prospects for peace, which seemed so bright last September to continue to dim and perhaps to vanish. If we do, the judgment of history and of our children will rightly condemn us."

Before Carter's trip was announced, Powell emphasized that "difficult issues remain." He said "the next step in the peace process is still under discussion."

Carter's secret proposals to try to salvage faltering peace hopes stirred interest in Israel and optimistic reports in that country's press.

Summoned to join the president for his brief morning meeting with Begin were U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance, presidential advisers Zbigniew Brzezinski and Hamilton Jordan and Powell.

"The Israeli government has responded positively to American suggestions on ways to help resolve some of the remaining differences" between Israel and Egypt, Powell said in a statement.

"However, it is important to understand that difficult issues remain. The next step in the peace process is still under discussion."

In Cairo, meanwhile, Egyptian officials said President Sadat spoke by telephone with Carter today and would decide within 48 hours whether to go to Washington.

The surprise development appeared to buoy the hopes of U.S. officials who had expressed no optimism Sunday in announcing the American move.

But even then they emphasized that the U.S. suggestions dealt with only some of the remaining obstacles to completion of the long-elusive peace treaty.

"I'm sure that it's going to contribute to the process of the negotiations," Israeli Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin told reporters after the cabinet meeting in Jerusalem. He made clear he was referring to Begin's recommendations and not Carter's proposals.

Libya Backs Amin in War With Tanzania

NAIROBI (UPI) — Libya has airlifted 1,000 troops and military supplies to Uganda in a major effort to prop up President Idi Amin's beleaguered government, authoritative diplomatic sources said today.

Americans and Europeans living in Uganda were urged to leave the country as quickly as possible because of the deteriorating situation.

The magnitude of the Libyan airlift, which was continuing today, indicated that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy is giving Amin his all-out support.

The sources said Khadafy's backing may tip the scales in Amin's favor in the 4-month-old war with Tanzania.

"Two weeks ago I would have said Amin is finished," one source said. "But the apparent decision by Libya to support Amin unconditionally changes the balance of power completely."

According to the sources, Libyans have no great affection for Amin but feel that because he is a Muslim, Uganda can be considered a Muslim country and will lean toward the Arab world.

Tanzanian forces were said to be advancing along a road from the southern town of Masaka toward Kampala, but Western diplomats in Nairobi said it was unclear how deeply they had advanced.

The West German Embassy in Kampala, which represents U.S. interests in Uganda, strongly recommended that all Americans and West Europeans leave immediately.

There are now about 130 Americans, mostly missionaries, living in Uganda. Many of them already have indicated they intend to stay despite the dangers.

Diplomatic sources said giant Libyan Air Force transports have been ferrying combat troops to the Ugandan capital of Kampala for the past 10 days.

Another Two Firebombings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were to appear in court here today on firebombing charges as police were investigating two more attacks in the Vancouver area and two weekend incidents in the Fraser Valley community of Chilliwack.

The two firebombing incidents early today — one at a downtown bank and the other at a West Vancouver school — brought to 19 the number of attacks in the past 10 weeks.

Police said a bottle filled with gasoline was tossed through the window of the main Toronto-Dominion Bank branch at Georgia and Granville, the heart of Vancouver's downtown area. There was only minor damage, police said.

West Vancouver police were investigating the second firebombing attack in the last week on Gleneagles Community Elementary School. Several boys were spotted running from the school after the first attack last week.

RCMP in Chilliwack, about 90 kilometres east of here, were investigating two weekend attacks on the same supermarket.

China Ends 'Lesson' Begins Withdrawal

BANGKOK (AP) — China announced today it has begun withdrawing its troops from Vietnam, 16 days after they struck across the border to "teach" Hanoi a bloody military "lesson."

Peking's official news agency said the invasion force is being pulled out "after achieving the goals assigned them." But Vietnam called the Chinese attack a failure. It was reported to have cost the lives of thousands on both sides.

The Japanese news service Kyodo said in a dispatch from Peking that the government announced all Chinese troops are being withdrawn.

The announcement by China's Xinhua (Hsinhua) agency warned however, that "the Chinese side reserves the right to strike back again in self-defence" if Vietnam resumes the border "provocations and incursions" that China said forced it to launch its "self-defence" invasion Feb. 17.

The announcement added: "The Chinese government proposes once again that the Chinese and Vietnamese sides speedily hold negotiations to discuss ways of ensuring peace and tranquility between the two countries and then proceed to settle the boundary and territorial disputes."

It also called on the rest of the world to "take measures to urge the Vietnamese authorities to stop promptly their aggression against Kampuchea (Cambodia) and withdraw all their forces of invasion."

A radio commentary by the Voice of Vietnam, broadcast at about the same time as the Chinese withdrawal statement, said Peking's leaders had "failed in their large-scale invasion to teach Vietnam a lesson and could not fulfil their expansionist aims."

A Hanoi summary of the war said 10 per cent of the Chinese invasion force was killed or wounded and half the tanks and armored vehicles were destroyed. It said the bodies of Chinese officers only were taken back to China from Vietnam and it took hundreds of trucks to transport the bodies.

The latest summary gave no figures but a report Sunday claimed the Vietnamese had killed or wounded almost 42,000 Chinese, a figure western analysts consider inflated. Vietnamese casualty figures have not been reported and China issued no casualty reports.

Trudeaumania Reborn

By BARBARA CANSINO
Special to the Times

NEW YORK — A different time, a much different place, but it was Trudeaumania all over again.

Dozens of women, dozens of black-tied, frill-shirted men, were in New York Saturday night to see Prime Minister Trudeau — to gaze at him, smile at him, talk to him, photograph him, say they love him, dance with him. And a handful to taunt him.

Long before Trudeau arrived at Carnegie Hall for the Symphonicum Europae gala, they were there: the crowd which just wanted to look, and the crowd which wanted to shout. As the black limousine pulled up to the curb, crowds rushed in for the look. And the 50-strong protesters from the Greenpeace Foundation raised the pitch of their chant: "Boycott Canada! Save the Seals! Boycott Canada! Save the Seals!"

Trudeau, in black cape and top hat with a red rose in his lapel, stepped out of the car, flashed the big smile for the fans and photographers, paused a brief moment, then strode into Carnegie Hall. The fans crushed in behind him, and the pattern was set for the night.

During the concert opera glasses focused on and off Trudeau. Necks craned to box 59. Was he having a good time? Was he enjoying the concert? Apparently, yes.

He smiled during the performance, he blew a kiss to conductor Piero Gamba, he laughed out loud at Peter Ustinov and he smiled into the audience. One Winnipeg woman looked up to the box, gave a little wave, he waved back. She waved again, he waved back again.

At the reception after the gala, hosted by the Consul General of Canada, and attended by some 600 persons, Trudeau was the focus. He was besieged by photographers and women and high-ranking officials who introduced themselves or reintroduced themselves.

For an hour and a half they lined up, crushed in, said "You're so great," planted a kiss on his cheek if they could stretch their neck past the next neck. Gracious and friendly, he had a nice word and a smile for them all, inching from one room to the next.

Heather Martin, a University of Toronto economics student, went to the concert and reception because she wanted to see him and meet him. She was rewarded later when he asked her to dance.

After the party, the scene moved up the street to Regine's discotheque. Those who paid $250 for a ticket got to dine on tossed salad with

Gillnetters Jam Inlet

One hundred gillnetters were jammed in Esperanza Inlet north of Tofino today taking part in the herring roe fishery which opened Sunday afternoon.

Pouring rain and high winds prevailed when the fishery opened and bad weather was causing difficulties in getting reports from the fishing grounds today.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre dealt with five marine incidents off the west coast of Vancouver Island on the weekend.

The first occurred at 10:30 p.m. Saturday when the 63-foot seiner Elora Jane with four people aboard reported an engine fire.

At 12:30 p.m. Sunday the 36-foot gillnetter Crazy Horse reported having engine trouble. She was towed into Ucluelet by another fishing vessel, the Pacific Bandit.

There were three more incidents Sunday night. The 42-foot gillnetter Solander Isle was reported overdue from Ucluelet to Bamfield

The 37-foot gillnetter-packer Princess Grace with eight people aboard broke down north of Tofino and was towed into Tofino by the Tofino lifeboat.

The 75-foot seiner Northernor of Clyde with five people on board reported she was lost in fog off Cape Beale. She was located by the Bamfield lifeboat and escorted into Bamfield.

Eaton's Tests Detection System

Eaton's is testing an electronic detection system in stores across Canada to thwart shoplifters, says a company spokesman.

The system, invented in Britain and widely used in the United States, is being tried in stores in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Toronto, Frank Battershill, Eaton's Vancouver loss prevention manager, said Friday. The system appears to be extremely effective, he said.

A spokesman for Eatons in Victoria said the system is not being tried here.

"We're waiting to see how it tests out in the other places first," he said.

The system uses metallic tags fastened to all items on display. The tags are removed when the items are sold, but any item taken from the store with the tag still in place triggers an alarm system, Battershill said. "Although the smaller tags could be removed by a thief with scissors, it would be difficult," he said. "Larger tags, attached to clothing and major items can only be removed with a special tool. Otherwise, the thief would have to cut out a large piece of material from the garment."

CBC Loses Lawsuit

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Coroner Walter England has been awarded $5,000 damages in his defamation suit against the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and Adrienne Clarkson, hostess on the CBC program, Fifth Estate.

In a 45-page decision released Friday, Mr. Justice Calvin Tallis of the Northwest Territories Supreme Court, ruled in favor of England and also ordered the defendants to pay the nine days court costs.

The suit arose from an inquest into the Oct. 30, 1974 crash of a Panarctic Lockheed Electra at Rae Point, N.W.T. that resulted in 32 deaths.

England was the coroner who convened the inquest in April, 1975. It lasted five days and was then adjourned to Oct. 29 when it lasted two more days.

The CBC program broadcast Sept. 16, 1975 criticized England for his handling of the inquest.

Tallis said England had been coroner and justice of the peace since 1962 and accepted the appointments "as a civic duty with the genuine desire to render public service.

"His work under the most adverse of weather conditions involved a type of public service that is not ordinarily expected of a coroner."

In dealing with the defence of fair comment, the judge said it is "trite law that no comment can be fair if it is based upon facts which are invented or misstated."

He noted the defendants had a transcript of the inquest proceedings as well as access to all related court proceedings.

"Furthermore, there is no evidence before me that the defendants had an honest belief in the various statements made concerning the conduct of the plaintiff as coroner."

25th Reunion Set For City Regiment

Gunners of the Victoria-born Third Canadian Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment will hold their 25th reunion in Vancouver March 17.

About 60 men mustered for the last regimental gathering in Victoria.

Among the survivors are a few who took part in the 1942 assault on the French coast at Dieppe, including a handful who were among the first Canadian soldiers taken prisoner in the Second World War.

Nelson Longeuay, of Port Alberni, and Ernie Underwood, Victoria, were both gunners when they were taken prisoner from the beach at Puys. Underwood was a casualty.

Gunner Earl Davis and his brother Lance-Bombardier Lorne, of Vancouver, are among two surviving pairs of brothers who served in the regiment together. Both were wounded and taken prisoner.

Air Fare Cuts Blocked?

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. civil aviation officials will ask Canada to consider changes in international agreements that now permit Canada to block efforts by some U.S. airlines to introduce lower air fares for flights into Canada, officials said Monday.

Canada-U.S. talks are to be held here April 18-20.

According to U.S. officials, Canada has been preventing U.S. airlines from bringing in reduced air fares for some cross-border flights for some years under air agreements that permit one country to block the other's fare proposals if the somestic industry might be hurt.

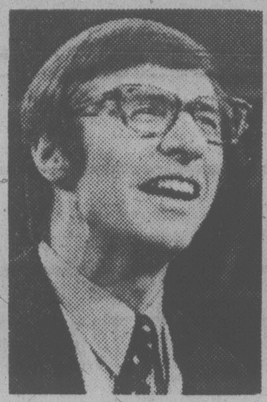
'Ronald McDonald' Clowning No More

SEATTLE — Ronald McDonald has been fired. Niles Brewster, the hamburger chain's clownish northwestern representative, loaned out an old clown costume for a restaurant promotion, an act deemed conduct unbecoming Ronald McDonald. He quickly learned that his $8,000-a-year, part-time job was no more, but the University of Washington drama school graduate says he's not entirely sorry as he found McDonald's pretty serious. "It is awesome to witness their dedication when you go back east to their seminars. They wear hamburger belts, hamburger shoelaces, hamburger everythings."

TORONTO — A legal secretary who was fired last week for refusing to stand in line for her boss's car licence-renewal sticker will begin a new job Tuesday. With lines backed up for two to three hours as thousands of Ontario motorists scrambled to beat the Feb. 28 licence-renewal deadline, Toronto lawyer Franz Bowman ordered his secretary to pick up his stickers as well as his wife's. Brenda Miskimmin, 22, refused and was fired for "insubordination." Local newspapers championed her cause.



KRESKIN

TORONTO — Joe Clark isn't Joe Who anymore. Now he's Joe Who's Who. At one time, Clark paid about $84 for the privilege of seeing his name and photograph displayed among the prestigious persons in a book called Who's Who in Canada. Now that Clark is leader of the Progressive Conservative party he gets free recognition. And last month he also made it into Canada's other people directory, The Canadian Who's Who.

CLARK

WASHINGTON — Kreskin, host of a Canadian-produced television series on psychic phenomena, has offered to testify before two U.S. congressional committees investigating the deaths of hundred of followers of Rev. Jim Jones in Jonestown, Guyana, last year. So far, neither committee has accepted his offer.

SALEM, Ore. — John and Greta Rideout, who captured attention when Mrs. Rideout accused her husband of rape then stunned everyone by kissing and making up, are still having their problems. Greta says the couple has yet to visit a marriage counsellor, but "we should. Things aren't peachy keen around here." For one thing, she is out of work and the couple is having trouble stretching John's part-time salary.

HOLLYWOOD — Movie industry veteran Carter De Haven Jr., who was an actor, director and producer during his 50-year career in films, has died at the age of 68. De Haven is brother of actress Gloria De Haven and son of early motion picture stars Carter De Haven Sr. and Flora Parker De Haven.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Actress Elizabeth Taylor has apparently been injured in a minor fall. Republican Sen. John Warner, the screen star's husband, broke the news to a group of eighth-graders wondering why his wife was not with him. "She fell on the ice and busted her finger," Warner said. "She was just not able to travel."

BRUNSWICK, Ohio — Laurel Miller is a little more sympathetic these days when her husband comes home complaining about a tough day on the police beat. Now she can say she's been there — at least for one night. Mrs. Miller spent a night making the rounds with her husband, Sgt. Thomas Miller, as part of a new program by the Brunswick police department to improve the married lives of its cops.

NAIROBI, Kenya — Idi Amin's wife, Sarah, has been proclaimed a war hero. Radio Uganda Sunday quoted the Ugandan president as saying that Sarah led an operation that saved old women and children caught in the fighting between Uganda and Tanzania. The radio said Sarah led a "strike force" of six cars to the front lines to rescue the civilians and that Amin was "very happy" with her bravery.

HONG KONG — Prince Charles toured housing developments, a walled village, chatted with picknickers and dedicated England's new military forces building Sunday during the first full day of his visit here. The prince started out in a grey suit and later switched to his Royal Naval uniform to unveil a plaque making the opening of the British Forces headquarters.

CHICAGO — A man who lay in a garbage-strewn apartment building basement for two weeks while rats chewed on him was reported in fair condition Sunday after having both of his legs and two fingers amputated. Cook County Hospital said David Hallman, 45, was transferred from Loretto Hospital early Saturday and underwent surgery later in the day.

MONTREAL — "There was so much, I couldn't believe it," the exasperated middle-aged woman said on the elevator trip down from the Elvis Presley memorabalia sale. So much, in fact, that she left empty-handed. Hundreds more fans of the King of rock 'n' roll, who died in August, 1977, at age 42, paid six dollars each to see and spend at the top-floor ballroom of a downtown hotel where more than 30 Elvis novelty dealers set up shop this weekend. The choice was overwhelming — Elvis records, Elvis T-shirts, Elvis books, photographs, paintings, calenders, clocks, licence plates, bumper stickers, envelope openers, movie posters and yo-yos.

Saudi Sailor Fears Stoning For Rape Rap

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — One of three Saudi Arabian sailors falsely charged with raping a hitchhiker fears he will be buried to his chin in sand and stoned to death if he returns home, authorities said.

Saudi naval officials at Little Creek, Va., accepted custody of Mohamed Al-Tarrony, 20; Hamed Al-Ajmi, 24, and Mohamed Al-Abdou-Rabah, 32.

The three were arrested Feb. 17 when a 19-year-old hitchhiker told police the sailors had raped her.

One of the men is married and has a wife in Saudi Arabia.

HARD TO RESIST is this 10-week-old Maltese terrier, currently a guest at the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter here in Victoria. SPCA folk would dearly like to see pup and all the other animals being looked after, moved out into good homes. All pets received shots and medical before being sold.

Divers Free Party Trapped in Cave

LAFAYETTE, Ga. (AP) — A cave-wise professor and six students — trapped beneath a mountain for 29 hours by flash floods — kept warm with calisthenics, warmed soup over a candle and traded jokes until rescue divers reached them.

The stranded party emerged bedraggled but chipper Sunday night after 29 hours in a large underground cavern.

When the first diver finally pulled his way against the force of gushing water through a two-foot-high, 60-foot-long tunnel to reach the stranded spelunkers at about Sunday night, the cavers were preparing to make their own way out.

"Two minutes later, we would have met them all down the cave," said Warren Moore, 22, a student at Georgia Southwestern College.

The first to slog from the watery cave was Cheryl Gillis, 19, who collapsed into the arms of her mother, Canolia Gillis of Macon, Ga., one of several anxious parents who kept a fireside vigil at the cave mouth in remote northwest Georgia.

"The first 200 feet was comparatively easy," said Larry Bean, the diver who first reached the party. Then came the 60-foot underwater struggle.

Once he found air on the far side, Bean shouted: "Is anybody home?"

"They started yelling, 'Hey, we're here! We're here' " he said. He said the group was high and dry about 1,500 feet from the mouth of the cave.

Barry Beck, an assistant professor of geology at Georgia Southwestern College in Americus and an ardent cave explorer, led a group of 11 into the Pigeon Mountain cave Saturday morning.

Tony Able, 19, one of four cavers who escaped before rising waters fed by torrential rainstorms flooded the only way out, reported after his friends were rescued that they told him "it was exciting and they had a good time."

The rescued spelunkers were wrapped in blankets, given dry clothes and offered warm drinks to offset their lowered body temperatures. Within 15 minutes several were giggling and joking.

Bean's successful effort was the third try to reach the trapped party. The others — late Saturday and at mid-day Sunday — were hurled back by the water's crush.

But Beck said the party was "completely in control of the situation at all times."

He said none of the students doubted they would be able to escape the cave.

When the party entered the subterranean world Saturday morning a light rain was falling and the water level in the cave was only slightly higher than normal.

Thief and Loot Return to Prison

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Convicted thief Nodar Khochasvili was released from prison Saturday and returned several hours later with two precious ikons and an ancient Bible he stole from a Russian Orthodox church more than four years ago.

"We finally made a deal with him and he kept his part of the bargain," a policeman said.

The ikons and Bible are worth more than $25,000.

Khochasvili already had served three years of his four-and-one-half year prison sentence for the theft from the church in Jerusalem.

Police did not say what they had promised in return for the long-hidden loot.

Planning for Planning

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm offered more details last week of his plans to streamline the procedures for municipal rezoning and development applications.

In a speech to the Greater Vancouver Regional Board, the minister hinted at half a dozen specifics to be contained in a municipal planning act he hopes to introduce in the legislature later this spring.

Some of them are long overdue and badly needed. One of the proposals, for instance, would require municipal governments to give a developer reasons if they turned down his application. Many municipalities do this now as a matter of courtesy, but those who don't can put a developer in a most difficult position. How can he try to improve his proposal to meet council's specifications if he doesn't know what the problem was the first time around? The requirement for reasons is nothing more than simple justice. The same thing may be said of Vander Zalm's suggestion of an appeal process for those whose applications are turned down.

Some of the minister's other ideas would also be beneficial, it would appear, provided only that the legislation leaves enough room for flexibility by the municipalities. One of these is the suggestion that municipal procedures should be standardized across the province.

Procedures that are roughly similar across B.C. would probably be more efficient, but variations in detail should be allowed to meet municipalities' individual requirements, based on such variations as population size, unique geographic characteristics and so on.

A similar argument can be made for his proposal that strict time limits be imposed on the various agencies that have to deal with applications. In many cases, this may work well, but the agencies should certainly be able to get extensions on these limits for cases which, for various good reasons, may demand longer examination.

Despite these basically good proposals, however, Vander Zalm's new act could be ruined by a couple of other items he wants to include.

One of these would require public hearings on an application to be held much earlier in the approval process than is now the case. It's easy to sympathize with the developer who has worked on an application for months, only to have it turned down because of the last step of the public hearing. To hold the hearing earlier, however, might well negate the entire idea of seeing how the public reacts to a specific proposal. A neighborhood that might welcome a high-class, tastefully decorated townhouse development, for instance, might oppose bitterly one that consisted of nothing but four concrete boxes stuck together. It couldn't find out which it was getting if a public hearing was held only on an application to rezone the area for "townhouse development."

Vander Zalm's second unworkable idea would require municipalities to provide sufficient commercial and industrial land within their boundaries. First of all, who is to define "sufficient?" The municipality? The provincial government in Victoria? The developers who want to build a 500-acre industrial park in a 2,000-acre village?

Second, how can this proposition be applied fairly and equitably to all municipalities? It might work in a community which still has lots of undeveloped land which the public is willing to see alienated for commercial or industrial uses. But what will happen in a community already quite fully developed? Will the local council be expected simply to rezone whole residential neighborhoods for shopping centres and warehouses?

Vander Zalm is stimulating lots of public interest with his speeches on the need to improve municipal procedures. This can only be for the best. We hope he now listens to the public reaction and continues to refine his proposals on the basis of that reaction. If that occurs, B.C. may well end up with one of the finest municipal planning acts in Canada.

Unpersons

The announcement out of Tripoli last week that the government of Libya has ceased to exist and the people will now rule themselves is one way of cutting through the insulating layers of red tape which have kept most governments remote from their citizens.

To westerners fed up with governments of all stripes, it is an attractive means of ending it all.

Who's to say this unilateral declaration of dissolution mightn't work in other nations with more complex types of government?

In Canada we've already gone halfway. Most voters call a plague down on all politicians; they're persona non grata with the taxpayers. If unpersons, why not an ungovernment?

JAMES RESTON

Mexico Demands Its Due

MEXICO CITY — Like many presidents before him, Jimmy Carter has had a successful mission to Mexico. He got along well with President Jose Lopez Portillo, who is a worthy successor to a long line of distinguised Latin American leaders. But this reminds us of a problem that has confounded the relations between these two nations every since Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed his Good Neighbor policy in the 1930s.

Almost all visits between U.S. and Mexican presidents in the last half of this century have been amiable affairs. They have been marked by attractive slogans and noble intentions, which somehow lacked durable policies and finally loitered down into the regretful memoirs of vanishing and retired old men.

Carter and Lopez Portillo seemed to understand this fundamental difference between personality and policy. They played politics on the television for the home folks. Lopez Portillo shook his fist at the giant up north, and Carter, knowing the old political devil game, which he has played himself, came back very easy and gentle.

Patient and Courteous

Carter recognized the hostility of the Mexicans — and make no doubt about it, that hostility exists — as he approached the hostility of the North when he ran for the presidency from Georgia. He anticipated all Mexico's historical grievances, including their resentment of his neglect of their problems over the last two years.

Nevertheless, Carter was patient and courteous in Mexico City, even when Lopez Portillo accused the United States of indifference and even "deceit," and he addressed the Mexicans in their own language. It would be hard to overestimate the effect of this simple act of an American president, regarded here in a U.S. embassy poll as highly unpopular before he arrived, of speaking Spanish in his address to the Mexican parliament.

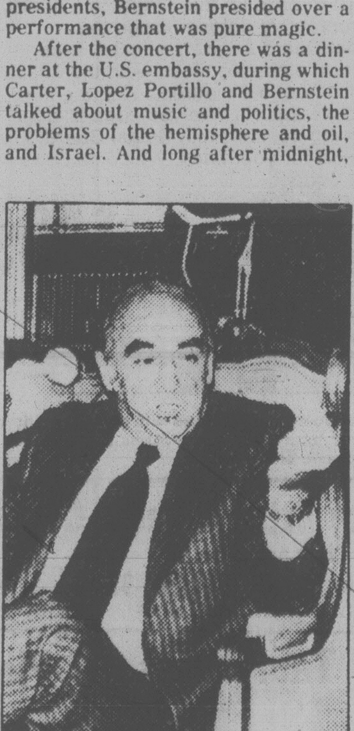
Carter began his speech in the elaborate chamber of deputies here, with a startling sentence about the changing world:

"As president of the fourth largest Spanish-speaking nation," Carter said of the United States, "I speak to you — as best I can — in the language of Mexico — the largest Spanish-speaking nation on earth."

Two other personal events took place here that contributed to the success of Carter's mission. He asked Leonard Bernstein to come here and conduct the Mexico City Philharmonic orchestra, one of the four and certainly not the best of this capital's symphony orchestras.

Berstein had an attack of asthma and got here very late, but drove this orchestra for hours early and late after he arrived. They played the Indian Symphony by Chavez, the Adagio for Strings by Barber, the Salon Mexico by Copland, and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. And in that huddled, steep-domed auditorium before the two presidents, Bernstein presided over a performance that was pure magic.

After the concert, there was a dinner at the U.S. embassy, during which Carter, Lopez Portillo and Bernstein talked about music and politics, the problems of the hemisphere and oil, and Israel. And long after midnight, Portillo made a toast to Bernstein. When he was young, Lopez Portillo said, he had gone to the Salon Mexico, and was present when the first performance of Copland's musical performance of Salon Mexico was played.



LOPEZ PORTILLO
. . wants respect for Mexico

"What I want to say," Lopez Portillo added, "is that I really discovered this piece tonight. It was due to the genius of this man — Bernstein — that I finally understood all the tenderness, all the violence, all the graciousness and all the intent of what used to happen in the Salon Mexico when I went there sometimes when I was young."

But the show is over now, like so many of these successful political performances in the past, and the tendency is to be skeptical and even cynical about all hopeful rhetoric, in Spanish or otherwise.

Yet there are reasons for some hope. Mexico has taken on a life of its own, wisely or unwisely, outside of the leaders of the state or the church. It keeps breathing and growing. Mexico City is now the second largest metropolitan area in the world, with almost 12 million. New York is first with over 16 million in its entire metropolitan area. Tokyo comes along with 11.5 million.

Those are the International Labor Organization's latest figures, but the ILO's projections for the end of the century, just published, are that Mexico City's metropolitan area will lead all the rest in the following order:

For the year 2000, the ILO projections are: Mexico City, 32 million; Tokyo, 30 million; Sao Paulo, Brazil, 26 million; Cairo, 15 million; Djakarta, Indonesia, 12 million.

You don't have to believe in all these computerized demographic projections to foresee the future. All you have here, this metropolitan area seems more fabulous: more crowded, more sophisticated, more capitalistic, more Americanized, more confident, and yet more baffled by the sudden contradictions of enduring poverty and potential wealth.

Enduring Institutions

Mexico has one foot in the 19th century and the other in the 21st. It keeps sweeping and building, and growing beyond rational control. Just when its population seemed to be outrunning its food, it struck oil and is now playing host in the last few months alone to Pope John Paul II, the presidents of the United States and France, the leaders of Israel and many others seeking its advice and favor.

Carter and Lopez Portillo seemed startled and even stunned by the implications of all these changes, and impressed by their own mortality. For the first time, in the long series of presidential meetings between the leaders of the two countries, they seemed to be saying that they had to think about the years beyond their own responsibility, and organize enduring institutions that would work on common policies that would endure long after they were gone.

This may be the most important result of the Carter-Portillo meeting — the realization that they will both be gone in a few years, and that the two countries need institutions to define common policies for their common and enduring problems.

That Headline!

I am furious and appalled at your headline referring to female RCMP officers as "Mountiettes." I have generally been patient with the majority of men, feeling that their consciousness and attitudes towards women will change, but this example strikes me as being a most lowly example of insensitivity, poor taste, and lack of respect for police officers. I am waiting for Iona Campagnolo to be referred to as an "MPette" or Queen Elizabeth as a "sovereignette." — Pieta M. Van Dyke, 1330 Purcell Place.

Confusing, All Right

Your editorial The B.C. Tel Deal (Feb. 22) says the issue is confusing and complicated. I would suggest your editorial has added to the confusion. True, you have confirmed that General Telephone and Electronics of the U.S. has now achieved more control of our B.C. telephone system, and you have confirmed that Premier Bennett's great song and dance about getting "voting rights" on the extra five per cent of shares now transferred to GTE has now been cut to two and one-half per cent, and in any event is meaningless because General Telephone still holds firm control of the majority of shares anyway. From that point you go astray.

It is not correct to say that the two companies Automatic Electric and Lenkurt Electric, now transferred to B.C. Tel from GTE, will now be "controlled directly in Vancouver." GTE of the U.S., as you confirm, still "controls" B.C. Tel and will therefore still "control" Automatic and Lenkurt. The earnings of Automatic and Lenkurt will certainly go to B.C. Tel, but will flow through to GTE. So again nothing has really changed.

Finally you miss out entirely, maybe because you did not bother to send a reporter to my press conference on this issue, on the major question of equipment supply. I raised a specific question about an order for millions of dollars worth of "digital" switching equipment placed last November by B.C. Tel with Northern Telecom Ltd. This equipment was recommended by B.C. Tel engineers as being more sophisticated and more economic than the type of switching equipment being produced by Automatic Electric. Now, after the share wheeling and dealing, this order has been cancelled by B.C. Tel and Automatic gets the order instead! So B.C. Tel and GTE get all the financial benefits and we, the customers, get to pay for and use the inferior equipment. B.C. Tel's answer to this? "The original order was a mistake." This is the key to the whole exercise. The usual corporate manipulation, so the age old practice of GTE and B.C. Tel buying equipment from companies they own and control regardless of its quality or price can continue. I am surprised this ploy confused you. — Gary V. Lauk, MLA, Vancouver Centre.

We Want Sewers?

The Times report "Sewers Wanted in Cordova Bay" (Feb. 23) seems a strange account of what happened at the Feb. 22 Saanich council meeting at Claremont School. For example, it fails to mention that the majority of speakers from the floor spoke against sewers as probably leading to high density population; it fails to mention that in a very recent municipal questionnaire 65 per cent of those responding are satisfied with present methods of sewage disposal in the area. At the meeting, it seemed to me that Mr. Finestone (who has only very recently emerged as a so-called "spokesman") by no means had a "clear majority," but that opinion on the real issue (i.e. high density population and not sewers) is very much in favor of keeping the population down for the sake of the environment.

Mayor Couvelier had positive things to say about the Cordova Bay Association, which for the past three years has addressed itself to a wide range of social and community issues. At every stage, as far as I know, the association has welcomed the membership and participation of all Cordova Bay residents. It has acted as a focus for community, and the large measure of support it continues to receive is an unmistakable mandate.

Whether we get sewers or not (and pressure from regional "experts" seems to indicate that we shall), as a community we must continue in our efforts to save one small piece of the environment from high density development. — Charles Doyle, 759 Helvetia Crescent.

No Golf Course

I was most disturbed to read of Oak Bay council's approval in principle of a par three golf course for the forested area annexing Henderson Park. This forest has long been a place of great enjoyment to the people of Oak Bay and the surrounding area. With the natural beauty of the greater Victoria area disappearing it seems disastrous for Oak Bay to be deprived of one of its last natural settings.

The need of a golf course in the area is more than satisfied by the Uplands golf course which adjoins the property to the south. Not all residents of Oak Bay are golfers. I see no reason a select few should receive the benefits at the expense of the enjoyment of others. Certainly the money provided by the legacy of Mrs. Florence May Paton need not be used on such a facility. The money was left "for purposes beneficial to the community such as the provision of a park, recreational facility or similar place . . ." Oak Bay is blessed with a wonderful natural park, should council see fit to channel this legacy into an organized cleanup and maintenance of the existing forest area.

What this really comes down to is whether the people of Oak Bay should be content to sit back and let another golf course spring up while hundreds of trees, (I believe the figure is 120) bushes, wildflowers and ferns are torn down, and countless quail, ravens, hawks, raccoon and other small creatures are made homeless. We all know these things are irreplaceable but these are empty words unless a concerted attempt is made to preserve them. — Rebecca Reeves, 3493 Henderson Road.

A Better Board

I couldn't believe, after reading the editorial It Couldn't Be Worse, (Times, Feb. 14), that the author and I attended the same school board meeting at Northridge school on Feb. 12.

I thought the board for once was caring about people at that meeting, and for the first time in all the time I've been a board watcher, really listened to those who came.

I dislike the way some of the trustees don't seem to remember what they discussed at meetings just a few weeks before, but maybe being in the minority has had a bad effect on the memory.

The changes I see are for the better. At least it isn't just a rubber stamping process any more; the education of our children is at last equally as important as how many dollars are spent.

I suppose that chairman Carol Pickup could be criticized for having the school board sitting three nights to finish up the business on each agenda, but remember that last year the board just forgot about the business left over after 10:30 p.m. Some members of the last board now refuse to extend the meeting time past 10:30 to finish the business. Pickup should be called conscientious rather than inefficient.

I am pleased with the positive direction in which I see the new board moving. When a little time has healed election wounds we'll have a pretty good board in District 61, maybe one of the best in years. — Helen Falta, 81 Battleford Avenue.

Letter Backfires

That letter from Bill Bennett is the best thing he has done for B.C. to date! It practically guarantees the return of people's government, Dave Barrett and the NDP.

Open line radio programs, street comments and the media are almost unanimous in astonishment and dismay at this letter, issued to all, alive or dead, at our expense and to tell us once again we are to get a present of five shares in our own property and resources!

If the whole thing was not so funny and ridiculous one might take seriously Bill's words.

"I am offering to every eligible man, woman and child . . ."

Since when did Bill Bennett have my property to offer me?

The whole letter is a gross insult and I am sure the previous owner of this home (long dead) will be glad he is not obliged to read the copy addressed to him. I understand thousands of deceased persons are getting this letter and all at the taxpayers' expense.

This should be the biggest backfire in political propaganda history. — P. Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

Save Our Marmots

Re: Island to Get Mountain Goats? (Times, Feb. 21): The idea of transplanting mountain goats to Vancouver Island is insane. Rather than to introduce another exotic species to the Vancouver Island fauna, the fish and wildlife branch should try to save the endemic Vancouver Island marmot and re-establish its populations on those locations where it has become extinct. — Adolf Ceska, Ceska Geobotanical Research Company, Victoria.

Alliance with China Against Russia 'Absurd'

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW
London Observer

While we all wait to see what happens next on the Sino-Russian front, it might be a good thing to look a little farther than the immediate show of violence. Of course there are voices in Moscow urging a heaven-sent opportunity to knock the Chinese out for years to come. Russia has always had a war party, and like all things Russian it runs to extremes; but it is not traditionally the winning party, though it has had its disastrous triumphs, as for example, the debacle of the war with Japan in 1905. It is unlikely that the present flare-up will produce a full-scale war with Soviet participation.

On the other hand it is just possible that it may do some good by sobering up the Soviet leadership a little and making it think twice about its relations with the West — and perhaps Japan as well. We ourselves could also do with a little sobering up, and with some second-thoughts, too, about our own whirlwind love-affair with China.

The Russians are very much afraid of China — not as an immediate threat but as a coming super-power. This is hardly to be wondered at when one thinks of that very inscrutable colossus raving away in a largely incomprehensible but quite bloodthirsty-sounding manner just across a long and extremely vulnerable frontier: an over-crowded billion against 250 million, or thereabouts — half of these not Russian at all.

Popular fear runs very deep. I remember a conversation with a youngish Russian journalist in Moscow, not a dissident, a party member making a career, who was speculating on what to do about China. Sooner or later, he said, the Chinese would start spilling over into the vast emptiness of Siberia; it was inevitable. He lay awake thinking about it. Might it perhaps be wise to invite them in now, revising in their favor those deeply resented 19th-century border treaties, giving them a good deal more besides, and let them settle peacefully and usefully in the hope that they would act as a sort of buffer? Or would it be better to smash into them at the first opportunity and at least put them back for the lifetime of his children? Or, how would it be to call Japan in aid, inviting her with all her own very clever millions and her organizing genius to share the rich wilderness and develop it hand in hand with Russia in a common front against China?

This conversation took place just over 20 years ago, before the great schism, and when most people imagined that Mao was Khrushchev's best beloved. Moscow in those days was swarming with Chinese "delegations": you ran into them everywhere. The venom of the comments made by Russians trying to compete with them in theatre queues, etc., had to be heard to be believed.

The great schism itself — the formalization of a quarrel that had been a long time brewing — occurred just on 19 years ago. Yet in all that time the Soviet leadership has done nothing openly to reach any sort of understanding with the West — or with Japan — in face of the sworn enemy in the East.

They have done a good deal covertly: the drum-beating but very hesitant movement towards detente has been largely to do with the Chinese threat. But this is never acknowledged, and hardly a month goes by without some Soviet action that appears to contradict the very idea of detente — in Africa, in the Middle East, in Afghanistan. While Brezhnev accuses the Americans, ourselves and anybody else who comes into his head, of every kind of perfidy, conspiracy and provocation.

Now he is making furious noises about our current dealings with China. And already people in the West are worried by some of these dealings because they give offence to Moscow.

It does not matter in the least whether we offend Moscow or not. If there is one lesson that can and should be learned about the Russians, but very rarely is, it is that whatever we do it will always be wrong. And this state of affairs is unlikely to cease even when we reach a more sensible and practicable state of co-existence than at present seems likely. It arises partly from congenital paranoia, partly from the practice of conscious spoiling tactics which, for understandable historical reasons, has become second nature over the centuries, both very much exacerbated by the nature and circumstances of the revolution.

But if it does not matter whether we offend the Russians or not, we should be careful not to frighten them clumsily. It may seem unbelievable that they should be frightened of anyone, with their immense armory at their command. But it is easy enough to understand for anyone who was in Russia at the height of the last war. When frightened, Russians respond with threats, sometimes of the most idiotic kind, never with appeals to reason.

They are indeed worried about our rapprochement with China. Yesterday they heard President Carter, or whoever, going on about human rights in the Soviet Union; today he is rushing to embrace the masters of a country that appears to have no conception of such amenities. Why? And what are they meant to suppose when the Chief of the British Defence Staff visits Peking and assures the Chinese, of whom nobody knows anything at all or can begin to understand, that they and we together face a common enemy?

The mutual hostility between Russia and the West has lasted now for over 60 years. In the light of what is happening in Asia (and elsewhere) it gets sillier every day. The fact that it was started by Russia when Lenin deliberately set out to undermine and destroy our favored institutions is important in the eyes of history but scarcely relevant to the contemporary political situation.

Russia is part of the West, whether she or we like it or not, as she will herself one day recognize. It seems absurd that we should ever be thinking of allying ourselves against her with a totally alien Communist China.

The Vietnam/Cambodia affair is enough to show everyone, Russians, NATO and all, that with China in the field the rules of the game are no longer as hitherto. This should suggest the desirability of great caution in our dealings with Peking.

Sooner or later the Russians, either this regime or a successor regime, are going to recognize that a super-power in the 20th century simply cannot afford out of sheer inertia, or funk, greed, or stupidity to base its policies on a mix between the wilder pan-Slav expansionism of the last century and the precepts of a professional revolutionary born in the year of the Franco-Prussian war.

It may be that the new Western orientation of China will accelerate this process. In a way it would serve the Russians right to find themselves held by a powerful encirclement from the Baltic to the Pacific. They have asked for it and go on asking for it. They could have peace with the West and with Japan by starting to behave as though they really wanted it. Let them, for example, pull down the Berlin Wall.

But although it is hard to sympathize with the Russians in face of China when they obstinately refuse to exhibit even a little of the spirit of enlightened self-help in the art of winning friends and influencing people without the aid of a black-jack, it seems to me that we have no real choice other than plugging away as intelligently as we can at keeping the lines open, while being a good deal firmer than we have been when they try it on — as recently in Africa, deliberately probing to see how far we will let them go (they do not know the answer yet!).

By all means develop all possible contact with China, but quietly and undemonstrably, and let the Russians brood on it. There are, however, limits to the possible. Directly threatening Russia with China is nonsensical (how can we control China? What is China?) and allowing China to threaten Russia with us would be ignominy itself.

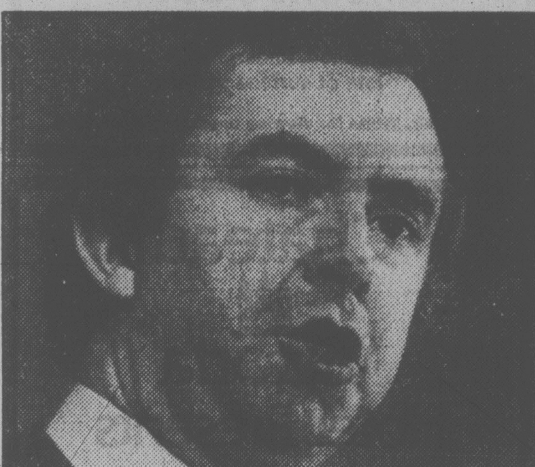
By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — The restraint program of a Conservative government, Joe Clark told a party fund-raising dinner in Vancouver, will be very different from that of the current administration.

The Liberals' "so-called restraint program", he said, "involves actual spending increases of nine per cent a year". Under the Conservatives, he pledged, "increases in government spending will not exceed average rates of inflation. In real dollars that is zero growth."

Think about it.

The Liberals have increased spending by nine per cent, whereas the Conservatives would increase spending only to the extent of the inflation rate — which happens to be nine per cent!



CLARK . . . 'SOPHOMORIC SINCERITY'

Hyperbole, cliches and playing with statistics have long been the stock in trade of politicians. For those of us who have to endure listening to such nonsense, the consolation is knowing that the politician is simply digging into his bag of rhetorical tricks, and probably even feeling a bit sheepish about it.

The unnerving thing about listening to Joe Clark, though, is that one gets no such feeling. Behind even his most embarrassing utterences there appears to be nothing but complete sophomoric sincerity.

In his Vancouver speech, Clark condemned the Trudeau administration for its policies on income redistribution, then went on to promise an end to capital gains tax on stock market profits if the Conservatives come to power.

From some people, such a statement would be the baldest form of hypocrisy. Joe Clark, on the other hand, appears genuinely unaware of the implications of his proposal.

Asked if the benefits of the measure would not accrue disproportionately to the well-to-do, he responded that half of Canadian stockholders have incomes of less than $20,000.

From someone else, that might seem like a classic case of misleading with non-sequitur statistics. When Clark does it, you get the impression that he is thoroughly misled himself.

The question isn't what proportion of Canadians in various income groups own shares, and it isn't even what proportion of these stocks are held by Canadians in various income groups. The capital gains tax has no application to the widow living off the dividends from Bell Telephone shares.

The relevant question is what proportion of stocks are bought and sold — speculated in for profit — at various income levels. And the answer to that can be found in the annual editions of Taxation Statistics published by Revenue Canada.

In 1976, the most recent year for which figures are available, the Revenue department tables show that 99 per cent of all capital gains from the sale of stocks were registered by the highest-income one per cent of tax-filers.

In other words, even assuming the accuracy of Joe Clark's rather questionable estimate that the measure would cost the Treasury "only $50 million," 99 per cent of that would go to the highest-income one per cent of the tax-filing population!

Such a proposal could only be made by an utter reactionary — or by someone who had no idea what the consequences of his policy would be.

Clark's attempt, in a TV interview last fall, to explain how his proposed tax deduction for mortgage interest wouldn't affect provincial revenues was so hilarious that the Liberals, with partisan glee, read a transcript of it into the proceedings of the House.

But is it really all that amusing if the Leader of the Opposition is unaware that, except for Quebec, provincial income tax is a percentage of the federal tax (about 45 per cent, on average) and that any new deduction thus automatically reduces provincial as well as federal tax revenues?

Is Joe Clark competent to run a national government?

Strangely, the only event to have launched a debate on his competence was the utterly irrelevant accident of his losing his luggage on his way around the world.

In the months to come, perhaps the attention lavished on Clark's grasp of suitcases will be matched by a similarly intensive assessment of his grasp of more relevant matters.

Beyond the Imagination

russell baker

Contrary to popular cliche, the world is getting bigger, not smaller. The fact was borne in upon me recently by a man who had just sped in from Europe aboard the Concorde and told me about lunch in Switzerland the previous day.

Soup, omelets and wine for two, he said, had cost him $80. At that moment, Switzerland relocated itself at a distance of approximately 100,000 miles from my part of the Eastern Seaboard. This is not quite as remote as the moon, but it is still a distance more than I care to traverse. Since then, Switzerland has disappeared without trace from my map of the planet.

Many other places have also put insurmountable distance between me and them during the past few years. Countries that used to lie just across the pond have picked up and moved beyond the Himalayas of imagination. In the time when all Americans were rich Americans, France was as near as Philadelphia and Germany as close as Buffalo. Now they are remote, unreachable lands from which Marco Polos return with exotic tales of $50 cab rides and $150-a-night hotels.

This phenomenon is caused by the decline of the dollar. The scientific law is easily formulated: Distance expands in direct proportion to the dollar's contraction.

We are speaking, of course, of the geography most people carry in their minds, which has nothing to do with time and physical distance. Everybody knows that in physical terms the Concrode and the ballistic missile have shrunk the world to the size of a prune, but the world most people inhabit has little connection to these arid laboratory measurements.

In the geography most of us carry in our heads, the world is divided into four zones: Home places, inner places, outer places and dark places.

Any place where a light lunch for two costs $80 becomes a dark place — that is, a place so fantastic, so macabre that none but the bravest explorer ever hopes to see it. Inner places are places that seem easily reached from home places. For a New Yorker, Asbury Park is an inner place these days, but so is Los Angeles.

Outer places are places you can reach without great difficulty but which you are not very interested in reaching. For a New Yorker, Greenland is a typical outer place. So is Newark. So is Washington, D.C.

Until the dollar started its tailspin, there were few dark places. Except for a few Communist tyrannies, most of the world seemed cosily close once you got to the airport. If Americans did not flock to South America, it was not because the Latin world was unreachable, but because we were not very interested in reaching it. It was an outer place.

Western Europe was an inner place. You went over for conventions, a two-week vacation, a visit with a child to whom it had become a homeplace, or the pure pleasure of getting out of town for a weekend.

For some this began to end when they discovered that rich American visitors were being outnumbered by richer Japanese and Germans, and they came back complaining that Europe was being ruined by rich foreigners. For these people, Europe moved a distance away in the mental geographies and became an outer place. You met them at Cape Cod and Reboboth, Del., complaining that Europe was no longer worth the hassle.

European inflation, coupled with the fall of the American dollar, sent much of Europe spinning off into the unreachable realm of the dark places for me when I realized that to see Paris again I would have to take quarters on a park bench and carry my lunch over in a brown bag.

Suddenly, with their $80 lunches, $50 cab rides and $150 hotels, the lovely old inner places have moved so far beyond the American reach that to traverse those forbidding distances again will be impossible unless I pull off a magnificent tax swindle or lease myself to a corporation whose expense-account practices would warm the heart of a safecracker.

And we have this stunning geographical absurdity. The Concorde shrinks the distance between New York and Paris to the span of a bus ride to Providence while the mechanics of international currency make the journey as inconceivable as a camel trek from Marrakesh to Ulan Bator.

I can conceive of riding the Concorde, but only to Asbury Park.

B.C.'s Mining Outlook Described as Rosy

TORONTO (CP) — Mineral exploration in Western Canada is on the rise, the president of the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines says.

Donald K. Mustard, president of the 1,500-member association, said that spending on hard-rock mineral exploration in B.C. increased by 12.6 per cent or $25.6 million in 1978.

"We would expect that the kind of increase we have seen will continue," Mustard said. "The interesting thing to me now is that a number of companies are buying up properties or are taking things off the shelf and having another look at them."

While B.C. does have as much oil as Alberta, uranium as Saskatchewan, nickel as Ontario, asbestos as Quebec or iron ore as Labrador, the prospects in gold, tungsten, molybenum and uranium are also good, Mustard said.

Swiss Won't Ice Shah's Assets

BERN (AP) — The Swiss government today turned down a request by Iran's new revolutionary regime that Switzerland immediately freeze any Swiss assets of the deposed shah of Iran.

At the same time, the Swiss National Bank issued a report casting doubt on claims by Iranian revolutionaries that members of the old regime had transferred huge amounts of capital assets to Switzerland in the dying days of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's rule.

The provisional government in Tehran has charged that the shah, his family and associates sent $21 billion in assets, including the crown jewels, out of Iran before the Pahlavi dynasty was toppled last month.

It has not specified how much of this "flight capital" is supposedly in Switzerland.

Swiss Justice Minister Kurt Furgler said today the Bern government feels that no emergency legislation is needed to resolve the problems raised in an Iranian message of Feb. 16, which requested that authorities here immediately block the further transfer of "illegally-held" Iranian assets in Switzerland.

Furgler suggested that Iran's revolutionary authorities resort to ordinary legal channels to seek repatriation of such funds back to Iran.

The Swiss National Bank report announced the results of an inquiry into Iranian holdings in Swiss banks.

It said holdings of Iranian residents, corporate bodies and the Iranian Central Bank totalled 1.964 billion Swiss francs ($1.170 billion) at the end of 1978 in the 25 most-active Swiss banks.

This compared with 2.070 billion francs ($1.240 billion) last June 30, before the anti-shah movement gained momentum in Iran.

The bank said the survey was not conclusive, however, because it did not include securities, Iranian direct investments and transfers of money via third countries.

Iranian revolutionary officials have said that in the months before he fled Iran in mid-January, the shah alone transferred $15 billion abroad, some of it to Switzerland. The shah is currently in Morocco.

The monarch's property in Switzerland includes a villa near St. Moritz that he bought in 1967.

JAL Cuts Fares

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan Air Lines has announced it will introduce advance purchase excursion (APEX) fares featuring a 23-per-cent discount on its Japan-Canada route from March 15.

JAL said the International Air Transport Association (IATA) approved its application for the lower fares Friday.

The airline plans to seek permission from the Transport Ministry and the Canadian government today. It said both are expected to approve the application.

Rights Abuses Studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The joint U.S. commission that examined human rights violations abroad is studying allegations about abuses in the United States.

The 15-member Commission on Security and Co-operation in Europe has collected "dozens of charges" that the United States holds political prisoners, or prevents Soviet labor union officials from traveling to the United States, or restricts the sale of Soviet publications here — or jeopardizes the human rights of U.S. workers by the fact they are unemployed.

The commission was set up after the Helsinki agreement was signed five years ago, to check compliance by the signatories. The most recent report, in December, said there were "a number of extremely negative developments" in other countries, such as the Soviet Union, but that the American record was good despite some shortcomings.

The commission has now turned to those shortcomings, according to staff member Stan Wise, who said questionaires have been sent to 23 government agencies, asking them to answer the charges from foreign and domestic groups.

Wise said that all the allegations will be dealt with in a report to be published by the commission this summer.

Firing Squad Kills 7 Shah Supporters

TEHRAN (AP) — A communique from Ayatollah Khomeini's Revolutionary Committee announced that seven more former officials died by firing squad at 5 a.m. today after one of the ayatollah's special Islamic courts found them guilty of killing or torturing opponents of the shah.

This brought to 24 the number of former officials whose executions have been announced. Several others have been reported but not confirmed and three men accused of shooting anti-shah demonstrators were stabbed to death by a mob in the central Iranian town of Najafabad three days ago as they were being taken to prison to await trial.

Among the seven executed in Tehran and their crimes were:

Gens. Abdullah Khajehnouri and Fakhr Modares, former chiefs of army courts who were responsible for the jailing and execution of thousands of opponents of the shah's regime.

Gen. Ali Akbar Yazdejerdi, former military governor of Mashad, responsible for the massacre of many people during anti-shah riots there.

Gen. Ahmed Sayed-Abadi, former governor of Tabriz, responsible for the massacre of anti-shah rioters.

Col. Mansour Zamani, former chief warden of the Qasar prison who supervised the torture of hundreds of prisoners.

Sallar Jaaf, a former member of parliament who killed at least 30 anti-shah demonstrators during a raid by tribal horsemen which he led in December on the town of Paveh, 540 kilometres west of Tehran.

Jehangir Taroq, chief torturer of SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

The government announced Sunday that it had broken diplomatic relations with South Africa because of that country's racial policies and confirmed that it will allow no more Iranian oil to be shipped there.

Leaking Oil Blackens Crete Beach

HERAKLION, Crete (AP) — Salvage tugs towed a damaged Greek tanker away from Crete's southern shore Sunday, but not before leaking oil blackened 16 kilometres of the island's beach and killed thousands of fish, officials said.

The 155,000-ton Mesiniaki Frontis ran aground early Friday while it was manoeuvering near the Kali Limenes refuelling depot. A 16-foot crack in its hull leaked 6,000 tons of the 95,000-ton crude oil cargo, which was being transported to Romania from Libya.

Spanish Army Officer Murdered in Madrid

MADRID (AP) — Three gunmen shot and killed a Spanish army brigadier-general today as he was walking home for lunch, police reported.

The men fired shots into Brig.-Gen. Agustin Munoz Vargas on a downtown street near his home and then escaped in a waiting car, police said.

Munoz Vargas was the fourth army officer slain in Spain this year. Police said cartridges of a type of ammunition used by terrorists of the Basque separatist organization ETA were found near the dead officer.

The group is seeking autonomy for several northern Spanish provinces. ETA is an acronym for "Basque Land and Liberty."

The terrorists have claimed responsibility for the assassinations this year of Madrid's military governor, an army major in the Basque capital of San Sebastian and an army lieutenant-colonel in the Basque capital of Vitoria.

20 Arab States Meet on Yemens

KUWAIT (Reuter) — Mahmoud Riad, secretary-general of the Arab League Council, urged the group today to do its utmost to end the fighting between North and South Yemen.

The fighting broke out at a time when the Arab world was passing through a grave and critical situation because of inter-Arab differences, Riad told an emergecy session of the league.

He called on all Arab countries to refrain from any act that could worsen inter-Arab relations or lead to armed conflict within the Arab world.

Pro-Western North Yemen and Marxist South Yemen blamed each other for the outbreak of border hostilities and accused each other of violating a ceasefire arranged by Iraq, Syria and Jordan.

The emergency council meeting was attended by ministers from 20 Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

It followed intensive talks Sunday night on a peace plan proposed by Saudi Arabia which called in part for a withdrawal of forces from both countries to within their borders.

North Yemen says that Cuban and Ethiopian forces have joined South Yemeni troops in border fighting which erupted 11 days ago.

The Marxist government in South Yemen and the Saudi-backed North have long-standing political and other differences and league members are concerned about the border clashes.

Ministers from 19 states and representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization will examine the background of the fighting today.

Trudeau Captivates Carnegie

seafood, prime rib of beef, baked potato, zuccini, chocolate mousse cake, champagne. And to boogie until dawn, yowza by yowza with the prime minister.

At first nobody really knew for sure he was there.

Maureen Forrester was there. Nana Lorca and Jean-Pierre Rampal were there. United States ambassador to Canada Thomas Enders and Mrs. Enders were there. Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon and Mrs. Lyon were there. Some said Neil Diamond was there ...

And Trudeau? To the best of anyone's knowledge, he danced two, maybe three times — as many times as the two secret service men emerged out of the darkness to stand guard at the stairs which lead down to the dance floor and the man.

Trudeau flew home to Ottawa Sunday happy with a promise by U.S. President Carter that the Alaska Highway gas pipeline will be built.

Trudeau lunched with Carter Saturday, intent on ending uncertainty about the pipeline's future resulting from increasing supplies of more accessible gas in Canada, the U.S. and Mexico.

In brief statements delivered on the lawn outside the White House after their private 90-minute luncheon, the two leaders emphasized the need to co-ordinate energy programs, including plans for construction of the $15-billion pipeline through Canada to the lower 48 states.

Carter said that by April 1 he would ask the U.S. Congress to approve plans for work on the pipeline, similar to one already in place in Canada, headed by Northern Pipeline Commissioner Mitchell Sharp.

Oil Companies Exploiting?

Meanwhile, Iraq and the sultanate of Oman have told their customers to start planning to pay retroactive premiums of more than $1 a barrel on their oil exports, an authoritative oil publication said today.

Oman, an independent sultanate, has announced an increase of $1.02 per barrel in the official government sale price, retroactive to Feb. 15, the magazine said.

It added Iraq has asked its customers to pay a "voluntary" surcharge of $1.20 a barrel. Officially, Iraq is not increasing its contract prices until the year's first quarter ends — in line with OPEC price increases decreed last December — but wants more money sooner, just the same.

In New York today, it was learned the worldwide crude oil shortage caused by the four-month long cutoff of Iranian petroleum production has begun to push up prices of the chemicals and plastics that are indispensable parts of modern life.

"Certainly we're going to be paying more," said Standard Poor's Corp. analyst Irma Rosario. "Eventually, all of these increases will filter down the line to consumers because plastics are pretty much everywhere."

Crude oil and natural gas are into gasoline and other vital fuels. But they also are the basic ingredients for thousands of items ranging from building supplies and fertilizer to telephone housings, plastic bags and dinnerware, as well as polyester shirts and suits.

Venezuela announced Saturday it will raise the price of its light and medium oil by more than $1.70 a barrel effective April 1.

The incrase includes one previously scheduled by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) plus another similar to those adopted by many oil exporters because of the oil shortage created by the revolution in Iran.

Canada imports Venezuelan crude.

$10,000 Fire In Sidney

Sidney firefighters snuffed a blaze in the attic of a cottage at 9470 Lochside early this morning that caused an estimated $10,000 damage. No one was injured. The fire broke out about 1 a.m.

Saanich Police Train on Batons

Saanich police are being trained to use wooden batons which will soon be carried in all police cruisers.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, who is also chairman of the municipality's police board, said the batons, which are 66 cm long and five cm thick, are for defensive purposes and are to be used in situations where the use of a firearm is not warranted.

"The police board may be asked to lay down procedures for use of the batons," he said.

Several police officers received training in the use of the batons at the Vancouver Police Academy and now are training other members of the 110-person force.

"They realize it's a lethal weapon," said Couvelier, "and will only use it in extreme situations when their life is threatened."

$150 a Week to Sleep

SEATTLE (AP) — Wanted: Person to be paid $150 a week as centre of attention.

Only qualification: Sleep eight hours a day under glass as an exhibit at the Pacific Science Centre.

"We're serious, even if it sounds kind of funny," Dennis Bartz, the centre's director of design and exhibits, said Friday.

The centre has advertised for someone to go to bed between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. as part of Dream Stage — Portrait of a Sleeping Brain. The exhibit is scheduled to run from April 20 to June 9.

"We haven't hired anyone yet, but we found one gentleman who happens to work in one of Seattle's restaurants, gets off and works in a bakery, then sleeps during the day," said Bartz.

The person will climb into bed, have wires attached to his head and fall asleep. A $250-a-week technician will act as a scientific guardian angel.

An Expert Paints a Grim Picture on Art Education

William Lennox-Bisset . . . struggling and penniless

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

An abysmal lack of art education in the provincial school system is creating generations of "handicapped" individuals, the director of the Victoria Art Gallery says.

And, warns Roger Boulet, the repercussions are affecting not only the way the public regards art, but also the future of artists themselves.

Boulet said surveys show that in areas where schools don't provide instruction in the arts, children grow up with very limited perceptions of the world about them.

"Skills using the eyes and ears are not being developed as well as those for reading and writing," he said. "But the eyes are important to stay alive, as any traffic light will tell you."

He said the decline in art appreciation has been a gradual phenomenon coincident, ironically, with the growth in the literacy rate.

"At the root is something very strange. Eight hundred years ago most people couldn't read or write but you were still able to reach them through pictures.

"Now everyone can read and write but somehow we've downgraded that (pictorial) means of communication. Visual perceptions are seen as something childlike."

Boulet said the attitude that eyes are only important for what can be read has changed the whole way persons perceive works of art.

He feels, however, everything will balance out in time. Two strange allies — television and movies — have already begun the process, he said. They are teaching people to use their eyes for something other than reading.

But the heart of the matter still rests in public education to instill a deeper appreciation of what art is, he said.

And until that happens artists will continue to fight seemingly impossible odds to practise their craft on a professional full-time basis.

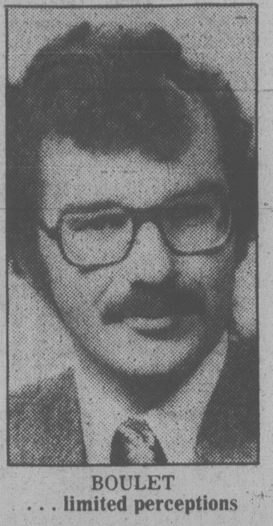
The struggling, impoverished artist is no cliche. It remains a fact.

A typical example is Victoria artist William Lennox-Bisset.

Born in Scotland 38 years ago, Bisset has no other skills but those of an artist. He's been churning out drawings and paintings for 20 years and says his works hang in the private collections of such notables as H.R.H. Princess Margaret, Lady Bliss, wife of the late Sir Arthur Bliss, Master of the Queen's Music, composer Patrick Gowers, and producer Isabella Wallich.

A protege of Sir Francis Bacon, regarded as Britain's greatest contemporary artist, Bisset has several outstanding credits. He was commissioned by the distinguished Welsh conductor, Wyn Norris, to paint the posthumous portraits of Gustav Mahler and Anton Bruckner.

He was also commissioned to paint Bliss's portrait which was presented to Bliss on his 80th birthday.



BOULET
. . . limited perceptions

Bisset came to Canada eight years ago for family reasons and except for a 12-month sojourn in Europe last year, has lived in Vancouver, Nanaimo and now Victoria.

Unable to support himself and a young, new family solely from his art work, he's had to turn his hand to laboring, washing dishes and crewing on tugs and fishboats.

But it's become increasingly tougher to find these types of jobs, he says. He hasn't worked for seven months. Today he's penniless. His wife is expecting another baby and the family is on the verge of being evicted from their Queen's Avenue apartment.

Bisset believes he has the means — his collection of oils and watercolors — to improve his circumstances. He notes Media Gallery at 716 Yates has already agreed to sponsor a show.

The problem is finding a backer to stake the framing and material costs, which Bisset estimates at about $1,000.

He says he's been to practically every financial institution in town but no one will accept his paintings as collateral on a loan.

"Some of the people were positively rude," he said. "One told me I should pack up and go east because no one out here is interested in art."

Another banker told Bisset he didn't trust anyone any more. And another said banks just don't recognize art galleries or art as being a safe investment.

Bisset said he went to the Community Arts Council in Bastion Square but they refused to support him because he was a professional artist and if they gave him a grant it would set a precedent.

"It's practically impossible for anyone to become a serious artist," he laments.

Boulet agreed.

"It's partly the times we are living in, partly the economy," he said.

"As long as art is regarded as a frill in people's lives, as long as a third-rate calendar is as appealing on the wall, then we're bound to have this type of problem."

West Eyes Tourist Gold Rush

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The western communities hope to share in the gold rush revenue from the tourists who will pour into the Victoria area this summer.

"Victoria had a good tourist season in 1978 and this year could be even better," says Robert Waters, chairman of the tourist division of the newly-formed Western Communities Chamber of Commerce.

"If we are prepared to work at it, we in the western communities can share in the bonanza."

From Goldstream park to Fort Rodd and from Colwood to the Sooke beaches there are a number of major tourist attractions that could be packaged and bring revenues into the region, he said.

"Most of the attraction is nature itself. Some of the most beautiful scenery on the Island is in our district. And we have a good supply of hotels and motels for accommodation."

The campaign will be launched with the help of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors Information Centre.

First on the agenda for the Western Communities Chamber is a meeting with the provincial government to obtain funding for a tourist office on the Island highway, preferably in Goldstream Park, Waters said.

The office would direct tourists into the Langford, Metchosin, Colwood, View Royal area as well as provide general tourist information on the region.

Waters said the WCC will promote the drive up the west coast highway as a major attraction for visitors and for people in the Victoria area as well.

Waters said the group must work very hard during the next two months to be ready for the peak tourist season here.

In addition to its tourist drive, the new chamber will promote the general interests of the western business community.

The WCC will launch a membership drive with a goal of at least 150 people, says president Ken Nelson, a Langford hardware merchant.

Two previous attempts at organizing the western merchants had not been successful but this third time should be lucky, he said, because of the broad base of the organization and the active co-operation of the Victoria chamber.

Juvenile Home Tenders Called

Long-awaited renovations to the dilapidated Victoria Juvenile Detention Centre will go to tender Friday, the attorney-general's ministry announced today.

About $200,000 will be spent upgrading the inadequate, overcrowded facility at 1125 Pembroke Street that houses between 17 and 20 juvenile offenders daily.

A leasing issue was finally resolved in January, clearing the way for the much-needed renovations.

They include:

—The addition of a schoolroom;

—Upgrading the living units including new doors, ventilation and better lighting of new kitchen and dining room and interior activity areas;

—New lighting and new ventilation throughout the home;

—New fire alarm system and fire sprinkler system;

—New electrical appliances;

—Upgrading of the playground area including new fencing and exterior lighting;

—Upgrading of the facilities attached to the centre including a woodworking area, recreation area and a special classroom.

The plight of the staff and inmates in the current facility were publicized in a Victoria Times article last month.

$400,000 Confirmed To Help Library Move

A $400,000 grant to enable the Greater Victoria Library to move into new downtown facilities was confirmed today by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

Curtis met today with the mayors of the four core municipalities to give them the news of the government's change of heart concerning the grant.

The minister said he asked ministry lawyers to review the criteria for issuing grants under the recreational facilities program.

The lawyers concluded that although the move by the library into the government building on Blanshard did not technicallly create a new library building, it did create new library space, and as such could qualify for the full grant.

"It is possible for us to clear away what had become a major point of contention," Curtis said after talking with the mayors.

The city of Victoria, on behalf of Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich, will receive $400,000 in provincial funding to enable the long-awaited move.

The new library, which should be ready by mid-summer, will be more than 40 per cent larger than the Yates Street facility.

Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf, who the municipalities felt originally promised the $400,000, said he is happy that the problem has now been resolved.

About 50,000 people visit the central library each month, using the collection of 231,000 books and other materials.

The new library will include a large, two-storey glassed-in foyer, easy access to all areas and a multi-purpose area on the main floor accommodating up to 150 people for meetings, exhibits and special events.

Today's announcement by Curtis ends the dilemma faced by the library board since Jan. 24 when Bawlf issued a press release saying that $150,000 — not $400,000 — would be a more realistic figure for a provincial government setting-up grant.

Bawlf was a proponent of moving the central library from its cramped premises at Yates and Blanshard to the new provincial government complex on Broughton in 1976, when he was minister of recreation and conservation.

All four municipalities had approved moving to the location only if the $400,000 government grant was forthcoming.

Demo sale but city not buying

The provincial government's B.C. Building Corp. is holding a demolition sale on a house being knocked down at 431 Government — but the city of Victoria isn't buying.

The city has not yet issued a demolition permit for the project.

Ald. Robin Blencoe today criticized the BCBC for jumping the gun and said the incident is an example of big government bulldozing small government.

Last week the BCBC applied for demolition permits for the Government St. house and four others in the area. But the city turned down the request because no information was available on the future use of the sites.

City manager Jim Bramley was instructed to write Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis and ask what the government's long-term plans were for the area.

But Blencoe said the BCBC went ahead without waiting to go through proper channels.

Neither the provincial nor federal governments are ruled by local land-use bylaws, however, and the province is not legally bound to acquire a demoliton permmit before starting work.

"I question the whole business of the province being above municipal law," said Blencoe.

He said the provincial government should be subject to the same laws that govern private citizens.

"It is acting like a Big Brother and ignoring our regulations, so I say it's time to review that legislation (that exempts the province from local bylaws)."

Blencoe said if the province continues to ignore local regulations then the city will have a difficult time working out long term development plans.

Blencoe said he is especially upset about the incident because he understood the government planned to replace at least three of the houses with parking lots.

"Surely the day is gone when we knock down houses and use valuable land for cars. We can't accept this blatant misuse of land."

He said if the government needs more parking space it should be constructing parkades.

The other houses to be demolished are at 321 Menzies, 415 Heather, 528 Michigan and 515 Superior.

What . . . A Fur-Bearing Sandwich?

A WHILE AGO, WE PUT in at a restaurant for lunch. I ordered one of my favorite snacks, an avocado sandwich. When my sandwich arrived, I did a startled double take. It appeared to have sprouted a luxuriant growth of fine green hair.

"Look," I said to my wife. "A furry sandwich."

Win gave me an indulgent smile. She said, "That's alfalfa."

I was aware of alfalfa as a green crop grown by farmers to feed their livestock. But I found it puzzling and disconcerting that the stuff should turn up in my avocado sandwich.

"Alfalfa sprouts," Win enlarged. "Go on . . . Don't be afraid of them. They're nice."

The sprouts tickled my nose and got in the way of the essential avocado. In taste, I found them only so-so, and said as much.

"You'll learn to like them," my dear one assured me. "That reminds me. I'm going to get a sprouter this afternoon."

Like most food fads, this of munching sprouted seeds has crept up on us more or less unnoticed.

It started centuries ago with the sensible Chinese, who decided that sprouted beans added to their meagre rations not only lent bulk to the meal but absorbed the varied flavors of the other ingredients. But because they were sensible, the Chinese didn't let their sprout-nibbling run rampant . . . certainly not to the point where a fellow can't tackle an avocado sandwich without having his nose tickled by alfalfa.

In the health food store we called at, we found sprouters of various sizes, shapes and designs. After a good deal of checking and comparing, Win chose an impressive triple-decked affair which looked uncommonly like a three-layered plastic birthday cake.

She also bought several packages of seeds.

"There," she said as we left the store. "All we have to do is put it to work and in a few days we'll have all the sprouts we want."

"Couldn't we maybe leave out the alfalfa?" I asked her.

"Oh, no!" Win said firmly. "It's very good for you. Anyway, it's just a matter of getting used to it."

That evening, Win charged the sprouter. It was a simple enough procedure.

First she sprinkled a layer of radish seed on the lowest of the three decks.

On the perforated floor of the middle deck went a coating of Mung beans.

Finally, with something of a flourish, she gave the upper deck a generous application of alfalfa seed.

"That's it," she said. "All I have to do now is damp them down with water. Then we wait for the crop."

Prompted by morbid curiousity, I kept the sprouter under close observation. Occasionally I lifted one or other of the decks for a look-see.

"Nothing's happening," I reported after the latest of these inspections.

"How can it," Win asked, "when you're always prying my sprouter apart? Leave it alone and they'll sprout."

A couple of days later, I came on Win with the three decks of her sprouter set in a row on the kitchen counter. She was looking down at them with a pleased smile.

"See?" she told me.

The radish seeds had definitely sprouted. The Mung bean seeds in the middle tray had a distinctly pregnant look. And the top deck was covered with a luxuriant green fuzz.

Win plucked a tuft of alfalfa from the plantation and nibbled it.

"Mmmm," she said. "Good!"

Since then, I find that by degrees the sprouts have grown on me. Quite often now, I pause in my rounds for an appetite-staying snatch of greenery from the sprouter.

I was even disappointed when the avocado sandwich I ordered in a restaurant the other day turned out to be the non-furry variety. I missed that tickling under my nose.

Even Coach Impressed By Power of Panthers

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

NANAIMO — "Wow," said Parkland Panthers coach Joe Milligan.

Wow, indeed. While many expected Panthers to win the Vancouver Island "AA" high school boys' basketball championship here, not even Milligan figured they would blow Nanaimo Islanders out of the Malaspina College bubble in Saturday night's final.

But they did. The score was 85-57, a margin that surprised everyone in view of the fact that the Islanders were the defending B.C. high school titleists.

Not much about the Panthers has surprised Milligan this season. From the outset he's been telling the skeptics his hopefuls are really as good as their record shows.

They certainly are, but in case there were any doubts after Parkland's flawless performance in the Greater Victoria league and South Island playdowns, they were swept away here as the team won its first Island basketball crown in the Sidney school's six-year history.

As a result, Panthers carry a 22-game winning streak and an over-all 30-6 won-lost record into their first B.C. final, March 14-17 in Vancouver.

Two of those losses were to Nanaimo in early-season exhibition games. It was the Islanders, in fact, who last beat Parkland. That was on Dec. 12.

Despite the setback, Nanaimo also qualified for a return trip to Vancouver and Mt. Douglas Rams have a chance to become the third Island school in the provincial shoot-out.

The Rams earned third spot in the eight-team tournament here by whipping Cowichan Thunderbirds of Duncan 70-56 Saturday night.

But to get to Vancouver, coach Rick Humber's Gordon Head gang must defeat the second-place finisher from the Howe Sound district, West Vancouver Hillside, in a special playoff slated for 4 p.m. Tuesday at Vic High.

Fifth place went to Oak Bay Bays, 91-68 victims of the Rams earlier Saturday.

It marked the first time in 15 years the Bays have not qualified for the provincials.

Cowichan reached the third-place playoff by beating Courtenay Towhees 88-75 in another Saturday preliminary.

Milligan, who coached three years at Terrace before moving to Parkland six years ago, also made a point this season of convincing everyone there is more to the Panthers than six-foot-nine Greg Wiltjer and Quinn Groenheyde, the hands-down winner of the Times Trophy Saturday as the most-valuable-player.

His players provided the clincher Saturday. Panthers ran into early foul trouble with Wiltjer leaving the game midway through the third quarter after picking up his fourth personal.

Then, when starting forward John Ibbotson fouled out seconds later, the crowd sensed a Nanaimo comeback.

It was not to be. The closest Islanders could come was 20 points and Panthers finished with a flurry.

Most of the credit for Parkland's success belonged to the shortest player on the team, five-foot-nine guard Dexter Williams.

Williams directed Panthers' attack brilliantly, outjumping taller opponents for key rebounds and scoring 21 points, second only to Groenheyde's 27. Wiltjer added 17 for the winners while Ibbotson got 10 before fouling out.

Islanders, who made it to the final despite losing most of last year's championship team through graduation, were paced by Mike Murphy and Kurt Kelly with 12 points each.

Rams used a fast break and good defence to beat Cowichan for third place and gain revenge for the T-Birds' 76-62 win Thursday that dumped Mt. Doug into the losers' bracket.

"We felt we had to stop (Gary) Stockford, who scored 30 points against us Thursday, and (Dan) Thorne, who got 21," Humber said.

Russ Thornton checked Stockford and cut his output to 19 points while Russ Mosher held Thorne to seven. Vince Cullen led the Rams with 20 points while Jay Loukes added 17.

Quinn Obvious Choice To Win Times Trophy

NANAIMO — By the time they got down to Saturday night's final, everybody knew Parkland Panthers' Quinn Groenheyde was going to have a problem getting all the silverware into his suitcase for the trip home to Sidney.

Groenheyde, a 17-year-old grade 12 student playing his final season as a Panther, was named winner of the Times Trophy as the most- valuable player in the Vancouver Island high school boys' "AA" basketball championship.

He was also named to the Times' first-team all-stars and collected additional awards as a member of the tournament-winning squad.

The 6'2" forward, who hopes to attend UVic next fall, was a model of consistancy, averaging 28 points a game in Parkland's three tournament wins.

Joining Groenheyde on the Times all-star squad were Wayne Andrews, who scored 50 points in three games for the fifth-place Oak Bay Bays, Jim Larson of Cowichan Thunderbirds of Duncan and Kurt Kelly and Mike Murphy of Nanaimo.

Neither Kelly nor Murphy accepted their trophies because the Islanders and their coach, John Levering, decided early in the season to turn down individual awards in order to build up team spirit.

Levering, inheriting nine first-year players, made the move to eliminate rivalry his rookies had built up the season before when they were with Nanaimo's three junior high schools — Wellington, John Barsby and Woodlands.

A committee headed by former Alberni high school coach Jack Gilbert also selected five second-team stars, who also received Times awards. They were Jay Loukes and Russ Mosher of Mt. Douglas Rams, Dexter Williams and Greg Wiltjer of Parkland and Gary Stockford of Cowichan.

Randy Marston of Nanaimo and Dan Thorne of Cowichan drew honorable mention as all-stars.

Third-place Mt. Doug was voted the tournament's most-sportsmanlike team.

Psychologist Steals To Surprise Alberta

OTTAWA (CP) — Wayne Matheson said he got most of the breaks when he skipped his Prince Edward Island rink to a surprise 6-3 win over defending-champion Alberta in the second round of the Canadiam men's curling championship Sunday night.

The Charlottetown psychologist, who said before the 12-rink round-robin tournament began that it would be his fault if his team didn't do well, stole two points on the eighth, two on the ninth and one on the 10th end to even his record at 1-1.

The P.E.I. foursome — which includes third Ken MacDonald, second Al Ledgerwood and lead John Scales — lost 6-5 to Ontario's Bob Fedosa of Pickering in the opening round of the week-long championship Sunday afternoon.

The 50th championship, which ends Saturday, will have a new champion as Ed Lukowich was eliminated by Paul Devlin of Edmonton in this year's Alberta final.

After the first day's play, Manitoba's Barry Fry of Winnipeg and Ontario were leading with 2-0 records. At 1-0 were Saskatchewan's Rick Folk of Saskatoon and Quebec's Jim Ursel of Montreal, the 1977 Canadian champion.

At 1-1 were Alberta, British Columbia's Glen Pierce of Vancouver, New Brunswick's Richard Belyea of Saint John and P.E.I. Newfoundland's Jeff Thomas of St. John's and Northern Ontario's Larry Pineau of Thunder Bay were 0-1, while Nova Scotia's Alan Darragh of Dartmouth and Don Strang of Yellowknife, representing the Territories, were 0-2.

In other second-round games, Manitoba nipped B.C. 7-6, Saskatchewan whipped Northern Ontario 7-1, Ontario topped Nova Scotia 6-3 and New Brunswick shaded the Territories 4-3. Quebec and Newfoundland had byes.

B.C. opened the championship with a 5-3 triumph over New Brunswick, while Alberta beat Nova Scotia 8-6, Manitoba beat the Territories 6-5 and Quebec bounced Newfoundland 8-2. Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario drew the byes.

Fry, the Winnipeg skip who won the national mixed title in 1973 but a rookie in the men's championship, trailed 5-4 after seven ends against B.C. in the second round.

However, the Manitoba foursome rallied with three on the eighth end, then gave up one on the ninth before Pierce and B.C. ran out of rocks on the 10th and final end.

Pierce said he didn't curl that well against Manitoba.

"The ice was a bit better in the second round but I just didn't curl that well. I made a few bad shots that cost us the game and Barry made some good shots."

Jockey Suffers Fractured Skull

OSAKA, Japan (AFP) — Japan's top jockey, Yoichi Fukunaga, 30, suffered a fractured skull Sunday in a fall at nearby Nikawa race track. Fukunaga, who has been top rider in his country the last nine years, fell with his mount, Marie-Joy, in the home stretch when he tried to avoid another fallen rider.

EXULTING in victory as overtime duel ends is Sylvia Sweeney of Laurentian Vees, who defeated Victoria Vikettes to win national women's university basketball crown. Sweeney was named tournament's most-valuable player.

Scrappy Vikettes Fall in Overtime

REGINA (CP) — Laurentian Vees won their fifth straight Canadian university women's basketball championship Saturday but they had to go into double overtime to do it.

A weary but stubborn crew of Victoria Vikettes forced the Vees to the limit before Natalie Vukovich sank two shots from long range early in the second overtime period to spur Laurentian to a 61-53 victory.

The Laurentian coach for all five national titles has been Norm Vickery, who also led British Columbia Thunderettes to three Canadian championships from 1971 to 1973.

Victoria, forced to play 13 minutes of basketball Saturday morning after a scorekeeping error led to a partial replay of a Friday semi-final, was down by 14 points at one stage in the first half but refused to thrown in the towel.

Laurentian led 33-27 at the half but encountered foul trouble that cost them the services of Sylvia Sweeney, a member of Canada's national team, with three minutes remaining in regulation play.

The score was tied 49-49 after 40 minutes and 51-51 after the first five-minute overtime session.

Agnes Baker led Laurentian with 19 points and Eileen Galuska added 14. Luanne Hebb, who played the last 14 minutes with four fouls, had 17 points and 16 rebounds for Victoria. Michele Belanger got 12 points for the Vikettes.

"I think the key to our victory was the way we avoided fouls in the overtimes," said Vickery. "Victoria was in the bonus situation throughout but we only fouled three times while staying aggressive enough on defence. We might have felt sorry for Victoria, too. Sometimes players do that."

Vickery was referring to the Vikettes having to replay the final eight minutes of their Friday semi-final with Guelph Gyrphons when the scorekeeping error wiped out what appeared to be a 52-51 victory. In the replay Victoria was forced into five minutes of overtime before winning 63-60.

"We've had to overcome so many obstacles all year," said Victoria coach Kathy Shields, who lost national team member Jane Favelli with a knee injury before the Guelph replay. "No one was down after last (Friday) night but they were mad. We felt something was taken from us and we were out to get it back."

Bishop's Gaiterettes of Lennoxville, Que., earned third place by downing Guelph 67-51 as Debbie Huband scored 21 points. New Brunswick Red Bloomers defeated Winnipeg Lady Wesmen 62-50 in the consolation final. Cathy Maxwell scored 17 points for New Brunswick and finished as the tournament's leading scorer with 73 points.

Hebb, who scored 22 points against Guelph, and Belanger, who also sparkled in Victoria's last two games, both were named to the all-Canada team along with Huband, Candy Clarkson of Guelph and Claire Mitton of New Brunswick.

Sweeney was selected the tournament's most-valuable player.

Vikings Nail Down Date with Wesmen

UVic Vikings have a date in Calgary Thursday with Winnipeg Wesmen, their first-round opponents in the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union basketball finals.

Vikings made it to the national college championships for the second year in a row Saturday night at McKinnon Gym by beating Calgary Dinosaurs 89-80.

Vikes wrapped up their second successive Canada West University Athletic Association title by beating the same school as they did a year ago in the best-of-three CWUAA playoff.

Last year, coach Ken Shields' UVic hopefuls took all three games to clinch it. This time they needed only two, adding Saturday's triumph to Friday night's 108-70 victory and eliminating the need of a third game Sunday.

Wesmen won the Great Plains Athletic Conference playoff in two straight Saturday with a 90-79 victory over Lakehead Nor'westers of Thunder Bay.

The victory saved the CIAU the embarrassment of seeing Lakehead in the nationals after the school had used an ineligible U.S. players in several pre-Christmas games.

The CIAU's punishment for the infraction consisted only of prohibiting Lakehead from being mentioned in weekly national rankings and barring the Nor'westers from selection to the finals as the wild-card team.

Eight teams, including the wild-card selection, compete in the single-loss elimination tournament starting Thursday afternoon at the Calgary Stampede Corral and winding up with the final Saturday night.

Seven of the berths have been decided. Joining Winnipeg and UVic, ranked third nationally most of the season, will be McGill Redmen, winners of the Quebec conference; St. Mary's Huskies of Halifax, Atlantic Intercollegiate Athletic Association winners following an 84-71 victory over St. Francis Xavier X-men Saturday; Windsor Lancers, representing Ontario West; York Yoemen, the Ontario East champion, and Calgary as the host school.

York has been running first and St, Mary's second for the past month in the CIAU weekly national rankings.

The wild-card team for the playoffs, selected by a CIAU committee, is expected to be named today and Shields figures it might be St. Francis Xavier.

Vikings Saturday shut off Calgary's scoring and rebounding with a superior defensive effort and an offence that produced a 20-point lead most of the way. The Dinos narrowed it only in the late stages after Shields went to his bench.

Highlight of the night was the standing ovation a crowd of about 1,500 gave guard Robbie Parris, who made his final home appearance for the Vikings. The five-time CWUAA all-star will have his No. 20 retired after next weekend.

VIKINGS (89) — Ian Hyde-Lay 6, Tom Narbeshuber 10, Mickey Welder 12, Chris Hebb 3, Robbie Parris 11, Ted Anderson 16, Gerald Kazanowski 9, Reni Dolcetti 6, Kelly Dukeshire 6.

CALGARY (80) — Pat Lee 13, Mark Jorgenson 5, Geoff Thompson 16, Greg Van Dolah 5, Scott Stevenson 9, George Hardisty 8, Paul Babcock 8, Eric Duerksen 16.

France Defeated By English Side

LONDON — England tossed a surprise into the Five Nation Rugby Union competition Saturday by defeating the powerful French side 7-6.

In another Five Nation match Saturday, Ireland and Scotland battled to an 11-11 draw.

France, which had nipped title-holder Wales 14-13 two weeks earlier, now has a victory, a draw and a loss in three starts.

ROGER NEILSON BACK ON THE JOB IN TORONTO

Leafs Like 'New' Coach

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs, with the "old coach" becoming the new one, and a couple of other National Hockey League teams snapped out of the doldrums at the weekend.

"Good hockey clubs don't stay in the doldrums very long," said Flyers' coach Pat Quinn after Philadelphia thrashed Buffalo Sabres 6-1 Sunday. "I think we're gaining some confidence. It's a pleasant start toward the playoffs."

Boston Bruins, who had been having trouble winning of late, completed a successful weekend with a 6-4 triumph over Detroit Red Wings at Detroit.

"We're starting to put the puck in the net again," said Boston coach Don Cherry, whose Bruins also beat Minnesota North Stars 5-0 on Saturday.

"We've had four, five and six goals in our last three games. I can see the bounce coming back into our game."

The same might be said for the Maple Leafs, who came through with a pair of weekend victories after coach Roger Neilson was reinstated to leadership. Neilson was fired Friday and rehired Saturday after the players voted to ask team owner Harold Ballard if Neilson could have his job back.

"We had a guilty feeling when Ballard fired Roger," said Leafs' captain Darryl Sittler. "We let him down most of the season."

But they bounced back, beating Philadelphia 4-3 on Saturday and downing New York Rangers 4-2 Sunday.

"I's nice knowing the team is solidly behind you," said Neilson. "It's almost worth knowing more that than having the job itself."

In other NHL games Sunday, Washington Capitals edged Minnesota 5-4, Pittsburgh Penguins drubbed Colorado Rockies 7-2 and Los Angeles Kings nipped Vancouver Canucks 3-2 in Vancouver.

Boston, which entered the weekend with three vistories in the last eight games, got the winning goal from Wayne Cashman with 5:36 left in a choatic first period when teams rammed in nine of the game's 10 goals, one short of the record for a single-period total.

Former Victoria Cougar Mel Bridgman scored twice and linemate Bob Kelly had a goal and two assists to power Philadelphia past Buffalo.

Alberni Girls Triumph

A.W. Neil of Port Alberni, sparked by the 22-point performance of Laurie Hunter, took the Vancouver Island junior high school girls' basketball championship away from the Greater Victoria area by defeating Oak Bay 65-44 Saturday.

Sue Walton scored 20 points for Oak Bay in the windup of the eight-team Island tournament at Lansdowne.

Arbutus trounced Cari of Campbell River 50-29 to pick off third place, host Lansdowne finished fifth by tripping Campbell River High 44-41, and Stelly's finished seventh after defeating Mount Prevost of Duncan 45-31.

A.W. Neil advanced to the final by clipping Cari 38-29 while Oak Bay stopped Arbutus 55-34. In other games Saturday, Lansdowne humbled Stelly's 65-39 while Campbell River edge Prevost 41-36.

Trilec Ends Title Famine

Trilec Installation, showing poise and discipline as they came from behind, ended a five-year famine for Victoria by capturing the British Columbia junior men's basketball championship Sunday.

Down 40-31 at the half and trailing throughout most of the game, Trilec edged Vancouver Corkys 73-72 on a 10-foot jump shot by Bruce English with only 20 seconds remaining in the final of the four-team, double-loss tournament played at Spencer Secondary School at the weekend.

Trilec thus becomes the first Victoria team to win the junior title since the 1975 London Boxing Club Metros. Trilec now advances to represent B.C. in the Canadian finals at Saint John, N.B., March 16-18.

While English posted the all-important points, Rick Jeffery and southpaw-shooting Darrel Johnston sparked Victoria's attack with 22 and 20 points, respectively.

Victoria opened with a 68-41 victory over Prince Rupert and clinched a berth in the final by defeating University of Victoria Jayvees 68-59 Saturday. Corkys, beaten 69-58 by Jayvees in the opening round, came back through the losers' bracket by defeating Prince Rupert 128-77 and then avenging the earlier loss by beating UVic 77-73.

Lumber Girls Lead Playoff

Height didn't make much difference Sunday as Victoria Home Lumber tripped the taller Simon Fraser University Grads 72-59 in a closely-fought opening game of the British Columbia senior "A" women's basketball championship at Dunsmuir High School.

Leslie Godfrey set the pace for Lumber, which held a 37-32 lead at half time, by scoring 25 points. Lorna Lundeen added 17 points for the Victoria club, which scored the final six points of the game to tuck the victory away.

The second game of the series is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday at Langara College on the Mainland with a third game, if necessary, at the same time and site Sunday.

"The kids came up with a super effort," said Lumber coach Jack Lusk.

Lusk added that the Victoria defence, which hasn't been been consistent during the season, finally clicked into place and shackled the more-experienced Simon Fraser squad.

The winner of the provincial title advances to the Canadian tournament in Edmonton on the last weekend of the month.

HOME LUMBER (72) — Marg Mainwaring 10, Leslie Godfrey 25, Karen McComber 14, Sandy Lewis 6, Lorna Lundeen 17, Linda Rebitt, Cory McLean, Bev Gait, Glynis McFarren.

Team Effort by Cats Has Coach Grinning

The plus factors are starting to consistently outnumber the negative ones and that is one of the reasons Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe can afford to grin broadly today.

Sure, it's nice to be resting comfortably in second place but Shupe, for reasons that can best be spelled out as p-l-a-y-o-f-f-s, likes to look beyond the obvious. And he still came out of the weekend with a smile.

The Cougars went into the weekend with a three-point hold on second-place in the Western Hockey League's Western Division. They came out of it with a seven-point advantage although it could have been, looking at the other extreme, a one-point deficit.

But the Cougars reaped the best possible results.

They scored a smart 3-1 victory over third-place New Westminster Bruins before 4,402 fans in Memorial Arena Saturday night, and followed up with a 5-3 triumph over the Breakers in Seattle on Sunday.

Those results, combined with Portland Winter Hawks' helpful 5-3 decision over the Bruins Sunday, have given Cougars control of second place heading into the final month of the regular schedule.

But Shupe is happier with the other aspects.

Like health. With winger George Fritz returning to action at the weekend, only rookie defenceman Tony Feltrin remains sidelined.

Then there's progress and style. In both victories, team effort was more obvious than individualism. Good work all the way down the line. The Cougars got superb netminding from Steve Amiss, improvement from the defence and excellent, balanced efforts from the forwards.

Bob Jansch is an individual sign that things may be turning for the better for a team that has been racked with injuries all season. Jansch, the biggest disappointment, seems to have shaken the season-long slump that has sapped some of the 18-year-old's confidence.

Jansch and centre Geordie Robertson teamed up to score all three goals against the Bruins. In scoring twice, Jansch made it six in seven games. Now with 18 goals, however, he still is far off the 42-goal target he hit last year.

Gary Lupul, with a pair Sunday, Robertson, Barry Pederson, Mike Shields and Greg Adams ignited the strong, take-charge play by the forwards. Against New Westminster, the forwards missed numerous good scoring chances but that minor failing was overshadowed by Victoria's superb checking.

Bruins never fired a shot at Amiss in the third period until the 12th minute. They scored their only goal, by John Ogrodnick, moments later but the Victoria checkers kept control until the final buzzer.

Hoping his charges are building momentum needed for playoff success, Shupe will look for more building signs Tuesday when the Cougars go against first-place Portland, the team that looms as Victoria's main threat for divisional honors.

The Hawks settled all playoff positions in the Western division when they defeated Seattle 7-1 Saturday to offically kayo the Breakers.

In other weekend games, Regina Pats took a big step towards squeezing into the playoffs by defeating Edmonton Oil Kings 7-3, Brandon Wheat Kings won their 51st game by stopping Lethbridge Broncos 7-5 after beating Medicine Hat 7-1 Saturday, Calgary Wranglers blanked Medicine Hat 3-0 Sunday and Lethbridge helped Regina with a 4-1 Saturday victory over Edmonton.

T-BIRDS EDGE CRIMSON TIDE

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Island Crimson Tide faltered in the closing stages Saturday and may have lost its chance of capturing the McKechnie Cup in annual intercity Rugby Union competition.

University of British Columbia Thunderbirds charged from behind with about five minutes remaining to defeat the Tide 10-9, getting the winning points when Preston Wiley kicked a conversion from a difficult angle.

Trailing 9-4, the Birds pulled within one point on a try by Graham Taylor and Wiley, kicking from near a sideline, sent the ball between the posts to scuttle the Islanders.

Robbie Greig scored a first-half try for UBC.

With their second successive victory, the T-Birds grabbed the driver's seat in the chase for the trophy. Victoria and Vancouver each have a win and a loss while Fraser Valley has been beaten twice.

The final round is scheduled next month with UBC meeting Vancouver and Vancouver Island tackling Fraser Valley.

Tide Juniors, however, trounced UBC Juniors 23-3 in the annual Japan Cup match.

Mark Pinchard scored two tries and booted two conversions to lead the Tide Juniors, Guy Prevost scored a try and kicked a drop goal and Norm Webster scored the other try. Ron Jay booted a penalty goal for UBC Juniors.

Strathcona Gains Provincial Final

Strathcona Ivy's overcame a 43-35 half-time deficit to trip Victoria Athletics 89-81 in the final of the Vancouver Island senior "B" men's basketball championship tournament Sunday at UVic's old gymnasium.

Barry Burch hit for a basket on a 10-foot shot with six minutes left in the game to put Ivy's ahead 75-73 and they never looked back.

Lorne Dakin led the overall scoring thrust for Ivy's with 36 points while clubmate John Albers scored 12 points and emerged as the top rebounder in the game.

Ken Olynyk topped Athletic marksmen with 26 points and Tom Holmes added 19.

Earlier in the day, Ivy's had knocked Athletics into the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination tourney with an 80-69 victory.

But Athletics came back for another chance with a 77-58 decision over Courtenay, which had eliminated Port Alberni 55-50 in the only other game.

On Saturday, Ivy's tripped Courtenay, 80-53.

Victory, Sickness, Patti All Part of Jimmy's Day

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jimmy Connors defeated Arthur Ashe, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3 in the finals of the U.S. national indoor tennis championships Sunday, and promptly became sick, a tournament official said.

Connors, who is expected to announce today that he has married Patti McGuire, apparently fell ill upon reaching the locker room after the post-match ceremony.

"It seems to be the same 24-hour thing that's been sweeping through here. If it had gotten him half an hour earlier, we wouldn't have had a final, because when it hits, it hits hard," said tournament director Tommy Buford. Several linesmen, spectators and reporters have been similiarly afflicted with nausea and headaches.

Immediately after the match, Connors congratulated the veteran Ashe, whom he had beaten in a final for the second time in the 1979 season.

"I had to bring out everything I had. I had to move great. I had to play great. I had to do everything great." Connors said in the post-match ceremony.

Connors declined the customary post-match interview with the press, prompting some to speculate that he was ducking those who have been trying for days to determine his marital status.

McGuire, the 1977 Playboy Magazine Playmate of the Year, was waiting for Connors outside the Racquet Club stadium, and took his arm as they walked with a cordon of guards through the crowds to the locker room.

Connors won the National Indoor championship for the fifth time, tying the record. The last man to win it five times was Wylie C. Grant early in this century. Connors won it last year.

Connors had reached the final Saturday with a 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 triumph over Vitas Gerulaitis.

Martina Mauls Chris

DALLAS (AP) — Martina Navratilova overpowered Chris Evert, 6-4, 6-4, Sunday for the singles championship at a $200,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

Navratilova dropped only one point on serve, during the first set, and missed only three first serves. In taking the $35,000 first prize, Navratilova needed only 72 minutes.

Tracy Austin beat Virginia Wade 6-3 in a one-set match for third place.

"Right now, Martina is higher emotionally — she is hungrier," the 24-year-old Evert said of her arch rival for the No. 1 ranking in women's tennis.

The standing-room-only crowd of 10,125 in Moody Coliseum agreed, gasping at Navratilova's dominance while on serve.

Almost without exception, it was serve, volley, point, for Navratilova. Evert seldom hit the ball more than once on Navratilova's serve.

"I hit everything well," said Navratilova. "Chris hit some very hard shots that usually would have been sure winners, but I was able to volley them. I seemed to outguess her today."

Navratilova broke Evert in the seventh game to take the first set. They held service the first two games of the second set before Navratilova broke Evert again, in a game that went to four deuces.

Evert broke Navratilova only once — in the sixth game of the second set — coming from a 15-40 deficit with two deep lobs that Navratilova couldn't handle.

Other than that, Evert got only three points off Navratilova's serve throughout the match.

KNEE INJURY ENDS SKEIN

DETROIT (AP) — Leftwinger Nick Libett's streak of consecutive National Hockey League games, extending over six seasons, has been stopped at 389 by a knee injury.

Libett, 33, did not suit up with Detroit Red Wings for Saturday's game in Montreal and will be sidelined at least two weeks because of the knee, a club spokesman said.

Another Cale-Donnie Crash

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Only 10 miles into Sunday's Carolina 500 Grand National stock car race, Cale Yarborough and Donnie Allison crashed while battling side by side for the lead, triggering another controversy and an eight-car chain reaction accident that sent three drivers to the hospital.

Pole-position-starter Bobby Allison went on to win the event by more than a lap over rookie Joe Millikan, who had relief help from six-time Daytona winner Richard Petty for about 80 miles midway through the race.

Dick Brooks was a distant third, followed by Tighe Scott and Richard Childress. The finishes were career bests for Millikan and Scott.

Opinions varied on whether anyone was to blame for the wreck, although two drivers involved blasted Yarborough.

Yarborough and Allison, who are on three months' probation for crashing each other out of chances for victory on the last lap of the recent Daytona 500, touched wheels in the third turn as Allison was attempting to pass Yarborough for the lead, with a big throng of other drivers close behind.

They spun out and Darrell Waltrip hit Yarborough, while Buddy Baker slammed into Allison. Allison careened off the track and into the cars of Richard Petty, Ricky Rudd, Neil Bonnett and Dale Earnhardt, who were trying to avoid the accident on the track apron.

Bonnett and Baker were sent to Moore County Hospital in Southern Pines for what was reported to be treatment of foot injuries. A hospital spokesman said both drivers had been released.

Petty was checked at the infield hospital.

Veteran observers in the officials' stand at the start-finish line a quarter-mile away from the fracas said the contact appeared to be totally accidental.

A subdued Donnie Allison said: "It was a racing accident. My wheels got down on the apron and I went into Cale's car."

However, Petty, whose opinions are highly respected and usually conservative, said: "What do you expect Donnie to say under the circumstances? Donnie got under Cale and just outmanoeuvred him, and Cale cut down on him. . . . It was uncalled for.

"Donnie wouldn't have got down on the apron if Cale hadn't cut down on him."

Yarborough was able to continue with initially only minor repairs.

The outspoken Waltrip was considerably more vocal in his opinion.

"Somebody ought to drag Cale out of his car and whip his butt," said Waltrip, who went into the race in the Winston Cup points lead.

"I can see why Darrell is upset," Petty said, "he probably had the best chance of anyone for winning."

Referring to the post race fist fight at Daytona between Yarborough and the Allison brothers, Petty added: "If they keep driving like that, I'm going to start fighting."

Neither Yarborough or any of his crew had any immediate comment.

Allison, who won $21,000 out of a purse of $155,000, averaged a record 121.727 miles an hour despite seven caution periods. He led most of the last half of the race after David Pearson dropped out after [illegible] 492 laps.

A record crowd of 45,000 turned out.

Soviets Upset

VANCOUVER (CP) — Athletes In Action-Canada, displaying unerring outside shooting, upset the Soviet Union's national basketball team 79-71 in an exhibition game before 6,100 fans Saturday night.

The AIA team, based in Abbotsford and consisting almost entirely of former United States collegians, moved ahead after the opening five minutes as they forced the youthful Soviet team into numerous errors.

The Russians absorbed the first loss of a three-game North American tour after defeating University of Louisville and East Carolina State University.

Jeff Fuhrmann led AIA with 24 points.

Island Athletes Grab Fair Share

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Local volunteers started to relax Sunday as the second contingent of 1,100 athletes left following the conclusion of the first four-day British Columbia Winter Games.

Officials from Richmond and Kimberley, meanwhile, returned home with their observations fresh in mind as they gear up to be the hosts for the next summer and winter games, respectively.

As the Winter Games opened Thursday, general chairman Ron Butlin said that the government is planning to increase the funding of the Games, in addition to changing the format.

Despite "growing pains" that might have been experienced, the results of the Games were excellent, said Neil Henderson, chairman of the board of directors of Sport B.C. Henderson said he believes the games are more effective in developing the level of provincial competition than the former festivals of sport funded through the provincial tourism and travel ministry budget.

"Once you get participation, you can identify excellence," he said.

Richmond directors are excited although their headaches will be increased, as next summer's games will have 27 sports and an estimated 3,200 athletes attending, compared with 21 sports and 2,200 athletes divided into two sessions here.

There were a few moments of controversy — mainly because of politics at one level or another - but it didn't bother the athletes.

There were humorous moments, too, such as a diving organizer's efforts during the first day to get everyone to sing the national anthem. Unfortunately, a balky record player continually slowed down and the anthem took five minutes to complete.

The gold medal-winners included figure skaters Sherri Middleton and Darryl Clark of Victoria, Doug Bedard of Nanaimo in Judo, James Ngai of Victoria in fencing, Norm Greenwell of Nanaimo and Sheldon Samuels of Campbell River in boxing.

Three Groups In World Meet

MUNICH, West Germany (AFP) — Canada will face the Netherlands, South Korea and Bolivia in Group A of the women's world basketball championships, which start April 29 in Seoul, South Korea.

The competition will have three groups in the qualifying section.

Group B contains France, Brazil, Australia and Senegal. Group C consists of Italy, Mexico, Austria and Malaysia.

The top two teams from each group join defending-champion United States in the final round.

BRITISH FIGHTER CAPTURES CROWN

SAN REMO, Italy (Reuter) — Maurice Hope of Britain danced a jig of delight and said a prayer in the ring after winning the world light-middleweight boxing title Sunday night.

Hope, 27, became champion after the holder, Rocky Mattioli of Italy, retired at the end of the eighth round of their scheduled 15-round World Boxing Council fight.

A tearful Mattioli refused to talk after the match but his handlers said they forced him to retire with a suspected broken bone in his right hand. He apparently sustained the injury in the opening seconds of the first round when he fell to the canvas. It happened 15 seconds after the fight started. Hope put Mattioli on the canvas with a left cross, but the Mexican referee made it clear he considered Mattioli had slipped. But that was when Mattioli suffered the injury and lost the fight.

The former champion, known as The Rock, fought on for eight bruising rounds. Hope was leading clearly on points when Mattioli's corner threw in the towel.

Cosmos Catch Vikings With Help from Bays

With a little help from Oak Bay, Cosmopolitan Royals moved into a tie for third place with UVic Vikings during first division action Sunday in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

In the only other Sunday match, Gorge nipped Powell River Villas 1-0 at Topaz Park.

On Saturday, Victoria West moved into a share of the first division lead with Victoria Athletics by edging the latter club 2-1 at Royal Athletic Park and Nanaimo City advanced to the quarter-finals of the annual Jackson Cup competition by defeating Duncan Village Green of the third division 2-0 at Nanaimo.

Russ Rimmer scored at the 10-minute mark and Gil McIlraith connected at 75 minutes for Cosmo Royals while goalie Mike Kliska was fashioning the shutout.

Eric Tersinger of Oak Bay and Ted Van Waes of Vikings both produced good goaltending efforts to earn the simultaneous shutouts.

Gorge chalked up its win on a goal by Clay Booth at 20 minutes and the shutout netminding of John Iruretagoyena.

Steve Forslund scored at 86 minutes to give Wests the triumph. Garnett Moen gave Wests the lead with a goal at 14 minutes but George Pakos equalized for Athletics at 73 minutes.

Paul Butler and Don Attig scored in the first half for Nanaimo, which will face Prospect Lake in the eights of the Jackson Cup competition later this month. In other quarter-finals, Gorge faces Oak Bay, Athletics take on Nanaimo United and Metro Toyota (II) plays Wests.

Two Card Failures Blessing for Byman

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The first two times Bob Byman attempted to gain his playing card for the American pro golf tour, he failed.

"It was," he said, "a blessing in disguise."

After the first failure, he played the mini-tours, and won a couple of tournaments.

After the second, he went to Europe. In 1977, he won the Dutch and Scandanavian Opens and, later in the year, won the New Zealand Open.

"Those were definite stepping-stones," he said after scoring his first American triumph Sunday with a par on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff against John Schroeder in the Bay Hill Citrus tournament.

"I had to have those stepping stones, that experience, to be able to handle the pressures and the demands of this tournament. I'm not sure I could have won without that experience. Probably not."

"I have an over-riding goal to be one of the best players out here," said the 23-year-old player. "To be recognized as one of the top 10 or 15 players, you must continue to perform. You must continue to win."

And, although the winner of four foreign titles (the Dutch Open twice), he said: "I'll now concentrate on this tour. I'll play abroad, but my concentration will be here."

Byman had to qualify to get into this tournament — which gained new stature with Arnold Palmer as the sponsor and Palmer's tough Bay Hill course as the site.

Byman had a one-shot lead going into the final round but dropped back into a tie with Schroeder at 278, six-under-par, with a bogey-bogey finish in regulation play.

Schroeder shot 70 despite a double bogey seven on the 12th hole.

Hale Irwin, Bill Rogers and Andy Bean, who led through the first two rounds, missed the playoff by a single shot at 279.

It was another four shots back to Tom Watson and five others tied at 283. Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C., shot a final-round 72 for a 291 finish and won $709. Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C., finished with an 80 for 296 and collected $532.

FOUR-BIRD STRING WRAPS UP VICTORY

South African Sally Little carded four consecutive birdies Sunday in a final-round 67 to capture the Bent Tree golf tournament, two strokes ahead of defending-champion Nancy Lopez.

The winner, who finished with a 278 total, collected $15,000 and Lopez, who soared into golf stardom here last year, won $9,800 for second.

Little was tied with Dale Lundquist for the lead going into the final round on the 6,105-yard course.

Playing in heavy winds, Lundquist shot a 71 for a 282 total to drop her into a tie for third with Jo Ann Washam, 69. It was Lundquist's best finish in her four years on the pro circuit.

Fifth place went to Pat Bradley, whose final round — a par 72 — gave her a 285 for the 72 holes.

But, then she put together birdies on holes 11, 12, 13 and 14.

"All of a sudden things just fell into place and I made four birdies," said Little, after winning only her third tournament in eight years as a pro.

Truckers Roll Past Islanders

MILL BAY — Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking defeated Kerry Park Islanders 6-3 Sunday at Mill Bay Arena in a Peart Division game of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Rob Frost led Truckers with two goals and singles were added by Glen Smith, Darren Irving, Steve Johnson and Barry Toporowski.

Andy Nash, Kevin Park and Doug Jordan replied for Islanders, who fell behind 4-2 at the end of the second period after finishing the first 20 minutes in a 1-1 tie.

The final Peart Division game is scheduled for Wednesday with Oak Bay Trios playing Truckers at Lake Cowichan Arena.

Saanich Braves and Juan de Fuca Gulls, who won the opener, meet at 8:15 tonight in the second game of the best-of-seven Patterson Division final at Juan de Fuca Arena.

BRICE, HARTLEY SINGLES WINNERS

Professional Russ Hartley and an avenging Val Brice captured the singles titles Saturday in the inaugural Racquet Club of Victoria indoor tennis tournament.

Hartley had to come from behind to defeat Racquet Club assistant Peter Smythe 1-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the men's final while Brice, gaining revenge for her loss to Sandra Moss in the city tournament final last year, won the women's championship with a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Moss.

Experience triumphed over youth as Ann Graham and Jean Shaw defeated Amanda Levey and Kelly Davies 6-2, 6-4 in the women's doubles final while Ernie Cockayne and Roger Skillings tripped Steve Perks and Scott Braley 6-4, 6-4 in the men's finale.

Andre Levey and Peter Wilson outlasted Janet Arnold and Ken Milne 2-6, 6-4, 6-1 in the mixed final.

Swiss Skier Close To World Cup Title

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden continued his unparalleled string of World Cup giant slalom victories Sunday, but it was Peter Luescher of Switzerland who was the big winner.

Luescher virtually clinched his first World Cup over-all title when Phil Mahre of the United States, his closest challenger, fell in the first run of the giant slalom and broke his left leg.

Stenmark, however, remained unbeaten in the GS this season, winning for the eighth straight time with a lightning-quick second second run. He came from .52 seconds behind Luescher after one run to win by more than two seconds.

Stenmark was third after the first run with a time of 1:19.42, following Luescher with 1:18.90 and Hans Enn of Austria with 1:19.19.

But the three-time World Cup champion from Sweden clocked 1:19.51 over the second run for an aggregate time of two minutes, 38.93 seconds. Enn was timed in 1:21.82 in the second run and also moved past Luescher with a combined time of 2:41.01.

Luescher, who had a time of 1:22.20 over the second run, was nine one-hundredths of a second behind Enn, accruing a 2:41.10 total for third place.

Canada's six-member slalom team was well-grouped far back in the field with Germaine Barrette of Causapscal, Que., the best-placed at 32nd with a time of 2:47.44. Peter Monod of Banff, Alta., generally considered Canada's best slalom skier, was a disappointing 33rd in 2:47.44.

The third-place finish gave Luescher 184 World Cup points. Mahre, 21, of White Pass, Wash., has 155 points, but his spill in the early heat ended his season.

"That's it for Phil this season," U.S. ski team director Hank Tauber said. "We're looking at three or four months, and Phil will probably be up and active this summer."

Stenmark is third in the over-all standings with 149 points, but he can gain a maximum of only 150 since he does not ski downhill.

Fourth in the giant slalom race went to Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia in 2:41.14, and Heini Hemmi of Switzerland, the Olympic gold medallist in giant slalom, was fifth in 2:42.15.

On Saturday, Peter Wirnsberger of Austria captured his second World Cup downhill race of the season and three Canadians placed in the top eight during competition marred by a severe injury to Italian racer Leonardo David.

Wirnsberger, 21, covered the 3,028-metre course in one minute 42.88 seconds to beat Peter Mueller of Switzerland by three one-hundredths of a second. Dave Murray of Abbotsford was third in 1:42.99.

David, a 19-year-old rising star on the Italian team from Gressoney-St. Jean, lost control on a bump before crossing the finish line.

He was reported in critical condition with a severe head injury Sunday at the Burlington, Vt., Medical Centre.

Austrians Leonhard Stock (1:43.16) and Ulrich Spiess (1:43.25) were fourth and fifth in the downhill. Ken Read of Calgary, a winner of two World Cup downhills this season, was seventh in 1:44.13, just ahead of Steve Podborski of Toronto in 1:44.17.

Caviar Scarce

Iranian exports of Beluga caviar have come to a halt and prices here have soared.

Biagio Vincia, owner of Paul's French Food Shop, said prices have gone up about 40 per cent in the last year and by 100 per cent in the last two years.

"There is no fresh Iranian caviar available in this country, but I have two or three jars of dehydrated Iranian Beluga left," he said.

John Arena, owner of Winston's Restaurant, is serving fresh caviar from Russia, which has strict export quotas on the delicacy.

Gas Line Break Probed

EDMONTON (CP) — Gulf Canada Ltd. experts may begin investigations today to determine what ruptured a gas pipeline that exploded and threatened an entire subdivision of the city, says on oil industry official.

More than 18,000 residents were evacuated Friday night when a rupture in the propane gas pipeline was discovered after a truck sparked an explosion of gas that had been leaking in the southern Edmonton subdivision of Millwoods.

The truck driver, a 23-year-old unidentified man, was in critical condition Saturday in hospital with second and third degree burns to 30 per cent of his body. There were no other injuries or damage.

The evacuated residents returned to their homes Saturday.

Bob Walker, manager of pipelines for Gulf Canada Ltd., told a news conference Saturday that the pipeline was shut off at its valve in Leduc, about 16 kilometres south of Edmonton, at about 1:30 p.m. Friday — as soon as it was known there was a leak and fire.

Walker said the fire at the rupture site will be burning until later today when all gas remaining in the pipeline between Leduc and Edmonton is burned off.

Then, he said, company engineers will try to find out what caused the near-disaster.

He said Gulf, which operates the pipeline owned by a consortium of 25 oil companies including Gulf, would accept responsibility for the incident if it were found at fault.

Walker, answering questions about reports that Gulf officials had not co-operated with the city in controlling gas that had leaked into sewer systems, said Gulf engineers were not told until midnight Friday night how many sewers were affected and to what degree.

As soon as that was known, all help possible was given to the city but until then Gulf staff been trying to cap the pipeline. That was done at 4:45 a.m.

Manitoba Liberals Pick New President

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Liberals picked a new president Sunday and laid plans to choose a provincial party leader who might guide them back into the political sunlight.

John Petryshyn, 33, a Winnipeg lawyer, won the presidency by 191 votes to 93 over his only opponent, Beth Candlish, a candidate in the 1977 Manitoba general election.

Petryshyn said his new job as party president is mostly an organizational one, but added: "Certainly, a main consideration is to find a leader for the party."

The Liberals are down to one member in the 57-seat legislature. Prior to 1977, they had three members. A decade earlier, they were the official opposition.

Petryshyn said Lloyd Axworthy, the member for Fort Rouge, would be "one of the foremost choices" for the party leadership, which Winnipeg lawyer Charles Huband vacated after failing to win a seat in the legislature.

But Petryshyn said the choice is up to Axworthy, who is mulling over whether to continue in the provincial political field or take a run at a federal seat.

The party has been without a leader since Huband resigned last April. Huband, recently named a judge of the Manitoba Court of Appeal, held the leadership for two years.

The Liberals lost their last federal seat in Manitoba when the Progressive Conservatives took their longtime stronghold, St. Boniface, in an October byelection.

John Reid, minister of federal-provincial relations, predicted Saturday the party would win four Manitoba seats when Prime Minister Trudeau calls a general election — something Reid said would likely happen this month.

Premier Bennett Campbell of Prince Edward Island, opening speaker at the three-day annual meeting, said Friday night the country is tired of the ideologies of the right and the left and will turn to the Liberals.

Petryshyn said the race for the presidency was evidence of renewed interest in the party. He said it was the first time in several years that elections for all main executive positions were contested.

Petryshyn's victory was viewed by some observers within the party as evidence of a split between the older well-established element of the party and newer members.

Petryshyn dismissed the idea there was a move to overthrow the party establishment, although he admitted much of his support came from outside established Liberal strongholds.

Ice Gashes Oil Tanker

PORT AUX BASQUES, Nfld. (CP) — Divers working at sea on the Liberian tanker Marilia discovered a large gash in the fore peak, or bow section of the 48,429 ton tanker, a Canadian Coast Guard official said Saturday.

Friday, the tanker was pierced by heavy ice which tore a five-metre gash on its starboard side. No other damage was reported, and divers were to start the two-day job of making temporary repairs today.

The official said the gash is not as serious as the prospect of losing the tanker's cargo, which is protected now by only a bulkhead.

The Coast Guard official said the temporary repairs, softwood and cement fill, will permit the vessel to proceed to port either in Port Hawkesbury, N.S., or Halifax, depending on ice conditions.

The 381-metre tanker, loaded with 80,000 tons of light and heavy crude oil from Venezuela, was bound for Ste. Remaud, Que., when the accident occurred.

The ship is reported to be in no difficulty.

Ryan's Federalism Supported

MONTREAL (UPC) — Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan offering "no promised land" won solid support from party faithful during a weekend general council meeting for a pure federalist approach to Quebec's constitutional future.

Addressing about 450 party members Sunday, the Liberal leader said it was "written in heaven" he would lead the party to victory on a federalist mandate during the province's referendum on independence.

"Our cause is good," he told the party convention. "We are not afraid. There will be difficulties. I am offering no promised land."

Ryan, who predicted Premier Rene Levesque would call the referendum this fall after the federal election, won overwhelming support from the Liberal council for a position paper on Quebec and its constitutional future, entitled Choose Quebec and Canada.

The council went through a series of comprehensive workshops on the weekend without changing any part of Ryan's constitutional document, a move that surprised even Ryan.

"The agreement among our members on questions about the constitution is far greater than I imagined when I joined the party and started my campaign for the leadership last January," Ryan said.

In his closing speech to delegates, Ryan said he hoped the document would be the basis for constitutional discussions at all levels, leading up to a detailed constitutional platform which a special party committee is expected to publish in September.

Offshore Oil To N.S.: Clark

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Joe Clark says he would give Atlantic Canada complete juristiction over offshore mineral rights and would share juristiction over fisheries with the provinces.

Speaking at a tribute dinner here Satuday night for national Progressive Conservative president Robert Coates, Clark said that if Nova Scotia "has the luck of a Leduc" the benefits should go to the province and not to the federal government.

In an interview later, Clark said offshore resources should be treated exactly like onshore resources, with the provinces having full control and enjoying the royalties.

The national PC leader said the Atlantic provinces have suffered more than any other region since Prime Minister Trudeau came to power in 1968.

He said the region has three times as many unemployed as it had in 1970, that its average income has declined to 62 per cent of the national average from 65 per cent in 1970, and that the federal Export Development Corporation did not provide funds for a single Atlantic export in 1977.

He said a department of regional economic expansion funding to the Atlantic provinces in 1970-71 was twice as much as unemployment insurance paid, but now unemployment insurance payments amount to three times as much as DREE funds.

"This means the government of Canada is trying to create a welfare economy."

He said he would attempt to create a growth economy based on the regions natural strengths.

Record Temperatures

WHITEHORSE, Yukon (CP) — Temperatures plunged to the lowest levels ever recorded for the month of February throughout the Yukon.

The average temperature here last month was -28 degrees celsius, breaking the previous record of -21 degrees set in 1972.

Williams Challenged On Health Care

KELOWNA (CP) — Opposition leader Dave Barrett has challenged Labor Minister Allan Williams to join the NDP's fight to oppose cutbacks in health care which could jeopardize the paramedic service that saved the minister's life earlier this year.

Barrett, here for an NDP caucus meeting, said Saturday that the paramedic service was established during his party's term in office and that it "is ironic that the present labor minister's life was saved by that service."

Williams required the emergency medical treatment after suffering a severe reaction to penicillin.

Barrett said he is glad Williams' life was saved and invited the minister to "disassociate himself from the government and join the NDP in its fight to oppose the government's hard-headed cuts in health care."

Barrett's comments followed presentation of a brief — one of 15 given to the caucus session — from Henry Theobald, chairman of the Kamloops local of the Hospital Employees Union.

The brief criticized the government's five-per-cent ceiling on 1979 hospital budget increases, saying the ceiling will mean cutbacks in health care and in jobs of those who work directly with the patients.

"Health care workers will be laid off while administrative positions increase," Theobald said. "Soon the chiefs will outnumber the Indians."

Dave Stupich, one of eight NDP MLAs attending the caucus, said the cutbacks may mean a saving for the first year, but in the long run they will end up costing the government more for health care.

Other groups presenting briefs to the caucus included the the Central Okanagan Teachers Association, several labor unions, Okanagan chambers of commerce and environmental groups.

Later in the day, Barrett told a crowd of about 750 that his party, if elected, would set up an institution to be known as the B.C. Savings and Trust Company.

Working in co-operation with the credit union movement, the company would compete with banks in the money market, the former premier said.

Barrett said his NDP government laid the groundwork for such an institution after receiving a report on the near-monopoly of banks in the money market.

Mrs. Schreyer Christens Coast Guard Icebreaker

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The newest icebreaker in the Canadian Coast Guard's fleet was officially named Saturday by Lily Schreyer, wife of Canada's Governor General.

The 100-metre vessel was named CCGS Franklin as Mrs. Schreyer broke the traditional bottle of champagne on the ship's bright red hull at Burrard Yarrows Corp. shipyard.

Governor-General Schreyer also was on the dockside platform at the ceremony. They arrived at the shipyard by Coast Guard hovercraft and made a short tour of the vessel following the ceremony.

Franklin will continue sea trials until it is turned over to the coast guard on March 19. The crew will sail their new ship in British Columbia waters before heading north in July to sail the Northwest Passage to Eastern Canadian waters. The icebreaker will be stationed at St. John's, Nfld.

Franklin, named for Sir John Franklin, an English explorer, who died in the Arctic in 1847, is the second of two Arctic Class 3 icebreakers built for the coast guard by Burrard Yarrows. Her sister ship CCGS Pierre Radisson was delivered in May 1978 and now is in service.

Crane Man Lucky

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A North Vancouver waterfront crane operator escaped with a few cuts and bruises Saturday when a 70-foot boom fell on his cab "crushing it like a matchbox," according to a witness.

It took police and firemen with acetylene torches over an hour to cut operator Steve Bushell free from the tangled wreckage. He was taken to hospital for treatment of shock and minor cuts to his head and arms.

Man Surrenders After 13 Hours

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A gunman, who held police at bay in this central British Columbia community for more than 13 hours Saturday, surrendered peacefully after talking with RCMP negotiators.

Police said the man was armed with at least three rifles and a shotgun and threatened to shoot anyone who came near. However, no shots were fired during the seige.

Police said the incident started in the early morning when the man arrived home, assaulted his wife and sent the woman and children from their home at gunpoint.

Hedley Spicer, 42, was charged with common assault, pointing a firearm, possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace and a breach of probation.

He is to appear today in provincial court in Prince George.

AUTOMATION
We're in favour of automation. But there's more to it than that...

Why are the 23,000 Postal Workers in favour of automation?
Because those technological changes (which have already cost you a billion dollars) should improve your postal service while improving our working conditions.
Why do we say that automation produces negative results?
Because the technological changes are presently being applied in such a way that they threaten the job security of thousands of workers and worsen our working conditions. A major percentage of Postal Workers have already experienced changes in schedules switching them from day shifts to evening or night shifts, without adequate compensation.
What kind of solutions do we suggest?
That the employer at least holds to the collective agreement of 1975 which established norms to eliminate, or to compensate for, the negative effects of automation, among others, noise, lighting, and environmental changes.
That the employer respects our acquired rights (seniority, classification).
That in order to protect job security, there be a better sharing of the work load among the employees.
We are ready to give you more details so that you can better form an accurate opinion on the Post Office's problems.
Write us at P.O. Box 8871, Alta Vista Terminal, Ottawa. We'll send you a special folder.

A Role to Make His Blood Run Cold

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Marjoe Gortner, the child evangelist-turned-actor, has produced When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder in which he plays a character that would make any evangelist's blood run cold.

Gortner portrays a despicable, drug-smuggling, foul-mouthed sadist who terrorizes a handful of people in a small southwest cafe.

It's inconceivable that Gortner, a tall, powerfully muscled man with strong, lean features, could portray anyone as diametrically different from the golden haired, dimpled cherub of a preacher he was at age 7.

Scott's World

Gortner says he discovered early in life a verity of the professional in religion: economics is as important as scripture. He is applying this knowledge to his film career.

Not content with working as an actor for wages, Gortner wants to produce and direct movies a la Warren Beatty and Clint Eastwood.

He saw When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder off-Broadway in 1973 and longed to star in a film version some day.

"The film rights were bought by a midwestern financier who hung onto them for two years. Ninety days before his option expired I talked him into selling the rights to me for $50,000. Then it was a matter of getting a screenplay written.

"I went to the original author, Mark Medoff, who's an English professor at the University of New Mexico. I gave him my ideas and we did the screenplay in five days at his house. That was in 1976."

Gortner now had the two essential ingredients for selling a movie.

"Instead of being content with doing my scenes and spending the rest of my time in the dressing room, I sopped up all I could learn."

"I discovered show business and evangelism have a lot in common — dealing with crowds, getting a return on your investment and building up a lot of emotion. They're both businesses.

Police Strike Folds; Mayor Firm

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans police, their union a shambles face contempt-of-court charges and an angry mayor who indicates he will not easily forget the 16-day strike that devastated this year's Mardi Gras carnival.

Mayor Ernest Morial, in announcing the strike's end Sunday, said the city would neither recognize any police union nor recommend that contempt citations against some police officers be dissolved.

Civil District Judge Richard Garvey, whose back-to-work order issued Feb. 16 was defied by striking police, could sentence disobedient officers at a hearing today to as much as six months in jail.

He issued the back-to-work order hours after 1,100 of the city's 1,514-member police department walked off their jobs seeking higher wages and increased benefits.

Near Miss: 'No Reason For Alarm

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration Saturday acknowledged reports that there have been at least 15 near collisions involving airliners in flight over the New York City area over the last few weeks, but the agency said there was "no reason" for alarm.

Louis Cardinali, the FAA's acting regional director, said that in all of 1978, there were less than 30 such incidents in New York skies, while the figure had risen dramatically in the past two months.

Voyager Now Off to Saturn

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 1 made its closest encounter with the colorful, cloudy surface of Jupiter after 18 months in space today and then began its 20-month cruise to Saturn.

Voyager's two television cameras were furiously transmitting pictures never seen before back to earth in the form of radio signals, which scientists develop into black-and-white, then color prints.

However, a problem developed within one of Voyager's 11 scientific instruments and scientists ordered a temporary shutdown of a photopolarimeter which measures chemical elements above Jupiter, the largest planet in our solar system.

"We're always concerned when we have to turn an instrument off," said project scientist Ed Stone, "but we will be turning it back on to determine whether the instrument will recover."

The failure occurred while the spacecraft was inside Jupiter's very intense radiation field, which Stone said may have caused the problem.

Dr. Garry Hunt of the Voyager photography team said that results of the historic approach were outstanding and "the excitement is really tremendous" among National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists at Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL).

Voyager's pictures showed in great detail the swirling clouds around Jupiter, and also produced several pictures that were surprisingly featureless.

Hunt said the pictures were closeups of brown spots that drift across the Jovian surface.

"This may mean we are looking at a very bland area," he said. "It may be featureless, but it may also contain a great amount of new information."

The Voyager, curving around Jupiter about 277,000 kilometres above the planet's surface, was examining several of the 13 Jovian moons as it sped away to Saturn. Before its closest encounter at 4:42 a.m. PST, Voyager excited scientists by photographing the tiny moon known as Amalthea.

MPs in Revolt On Home Rule

LONDON (UPI) — In a move which pushed a British election even closer, Prime Minister James Callaghan Sunday faced a revolt from within his own party over his "home rule" referendum fiasco.

"Having witnessed a crass error of judgment once, we don't propose to let it happen a second time," stormed member of parliament Eric Moonman.

He was one of 40 MPs from Callaghan's Labor party who said they would warn him they will vote to topple his government if he pushes through home rule for Scotland despite its defeat in last Thursday's referendum.

But it appeared Callaghan was doomed if he does and doomed if he doesn't.

If he doesn't, he will lose the support of the 11 Scottish Nationalist votes which have helped keep his minority government in power.

Callaghan's team — which must call an election by October in any case — pushed the home rule for Scotland hard. But 33 per cent of the Scots voted for it, 31 per cent against it and 36 per cent did not vote at all.

"That is hardly a mandate for a major constitutional change," said Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative party leader.

The referendum law required a 40 percent "yes" vote for home rule approval, but pressure built up on Callaghan to go ahead with Scottish home rule regardless of the voting outcome.

"A simply majority prevails throughout democracy and the 40 percent rule was an utter nonsense," said Martin Flannery, another Labor MP. "The Labor government should go ahead straight away."

Callaghan's government already was reeling before its double defeat Thursday in Scotland and Wales, where the vote on a similar home rule proposal was 4 to 1 against.

Seven weeks of hit-and-run strikes against vital services like hospitals, schools, ambulances and garbage collection cut hard into its popular support. Reminders of the failure of Callaghan's pay-limiting policy are in every huge pile of uncollected garbage on city sidewalks.

"We are down," said one minister, "but not out."

Rail Line Sabotaged

WINDHOEK (Reuter) — Guerrillas sabotaged a railway near the Namibian capital on Sunday while three Western envoys ended talks aimed at overcoming local objections to a United Nations settlement plan.

The relatively low scale guerrilla war in the South African-ruled territory took a new turn when members of the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) sabotaged a railway line 12 kilometres south of Windhoek, authorities said.

There were no casualties and the line was soon repaired.

Later the ambassadors — Sir David Scott of Britain, William Edmondson of the United States and Joachim Eick of West Germany — flew back to Cape Town, after meeting representatives of political parties and churches.

The effectiveness of the envoys' intervention will be known today when the South African government, after receiving the views of the constituent assembly in Windhoek, states its position to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Hats for Flattery and Fun

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO
New York Times

Once upon a time, in fact up until the 1960s, a woman didn't consider herself dressed unless she was wearing a hat.

In the free-wheeling 60s and 70s, hats were reserved for only the coldest of winter days and were donned purely for warmth.

A knitted watch cap or a beret pulled down over the ears was about the range of styles.

There are signs that all that is about to change.

In last fall's fashion shows on both sides of the Atlantic, models had all manner of hats perched on their heads: hats with big brims and little brims, with feathers and jewels and veiling, hats made of velvet and felt and satin — hats, in short, worn for flattery or fun rather than practicality.

For spring, it was more of the same. Only now the hats were made of straw, and trimmings were likely to be flowers or fruit or ribbons.

But the surest sign of all that hats are making a comeback is that suddenly there are hat designers again. First there were names like Makins and Carson-Underwood and some simple shapes in straw and felt, Now there are people like Kirsten Randolph and Frederick Jones and Stephen Bruce — all new upon the scene and brimming with ideas for shapes and trimmings.

The newest of all is Frederick Jones, who came to New York to be a milliner only two months ago. A 31-year-old native of Norfolk, Va., he started working in a millinery shop there when he was 12, went on to study at the Fashion Institute of Technology, then worked in Philadelphia as a fashion coordinator, and finally got up the courage to give New York a try.

For his first collection of hats, he's making the blocks, ferreting out bits of leaves and lacquered cherries in the millinery district and sewing everything by hand.

"The workmanship has to be extra special," he said. "The insides of the hats should be as pretty as the outsides." And, indeed, many of the evening styles have silk linings that are stitched in as neatly as in the old days of made-to-order millinery.

He tends to favor sophisticated beiges, caramels and browns, in the small-brimmed shapes that once were called boaters and sailors but he also does the occasional broad-brimmed bravura style.

"I'm trying to get away from veils," he said. "Women look silly in veils for business or for running around the city. For dinner, they're fine. But I prefer the look of streamers."

Tangled Up in Wrong Tenses? Writers' Hotline Has an Answer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Are you suffering from a dangling participle? Tripping over five-syllable words? Don't know where to put your comma?

In an age when many people would rather pick up the telephone than a book, Daniel Littlefield's English department at University of Arkansas at Little Rock (UALR) may have the answer: 501-569-3162, a writers' hotline.

The 25 English teachers at the university seem to welcome the queries they receive daily from stumped writers, lawyers and businessmen across the country.

"It's like creating Frankenstein," Littlefield says. "But we always have the perfect way out of this. We could always have our telephone taken out. As far as he knows, UALR is the only college in the country operating a writers' hotline.

The suggestion about disconnecting the phone was made in jest. He and his colleagues are pleased that about 30 callers consult them each week about the finer points of punctuation, spelling and grammar.

The writers' hotline became a fixture at the English department last February at the suggestion of Stuart Peterfreund, then an assistant English professor. Peterfreund now teachers English at Northeastern University in Boston.

Before February, the English department had received a smattering of queries about grammar and punctuation from local writers. Peterfreund said he thought an orderly way was needed to handle the questions, and the hotline was born.

It began as a service to Little Rock-area residents, and soon attracted national attention.

Nowadays, you can call the English department between 9 a.m. and noon on weekdays and get answers to questions about tenses, attribution and apostrophes. The calls are fielded by a secretary and transferred to a department faculty member.

"It's amazing. We get calls from New Jersey, New York and we had one last week from Bellingham, Wash.," Littlefield says.

The hotline has its regulars. They include a school system in Texas, a Miami lawyer and the staff of a newsletter at a Sandusky, Ohio, ball bearing plant.

"They ask questions about punctuation, usage, plural and possessive forms," he says. "They always seem pleased when we give them the information, and we really appreciate that."

Littlefield says he wishes other colleges would set up writers' hotlines.

"We believe that it is necessary for people in the 20th century to read and write the language. We're doing our part and would like to see others, too."

Jogging Injures Knees: Doctor

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jogging can be harmful to the knees, a Minnesota orthopaedic surgeon told a convention of foot doctors.

Dr. Lowell D. Lutter, St. Paul, told the American Orthopaedic Foot Society conclave that 35 per cent of his clinic's running patients have sustained knee injuries in the past four years. Recovery time averaged around 40 days, he said.

Knee problems are for the most part related directly to abnormal foot positions, Dr. Lutter said, noting that although a foot is designed to handle stress, a runner places abnormally high demands on it.

"The runner who averages 30 minutes a day has an average of 27,000 foot strikes per workout."

He said a major answer was an orthotic insert in the shoe to help dissipate the stress.

Surprises Give Rooms Fresh Look

Doing the unexpected and creating surprises when furnishing a home give a room a fresh, new look. An example is to use a furniture piece in more than one way, as a room divider in addition to storage or a closet made to house a desk. Imagination and experimenting does the trick.

Such an approach is seen in this master bedroom by interior designer Pat Yeiser. Conventionally the king size bed would have a headboard flanked by bedside tables and lamps on each side. But this long wall demanded more than that.

Instead of cluttering the space with assorted furniture items, two massive china-cupboards, usually found in dining rooms or living rooms, stand on each side of the bed. Their large proportions eliminate the need for a headboard. In fact, the wall functions as a headboard largely because of the cornice which stretches between the cupboards and frames the space.

The cornice is 19 inches from top to scalloped edge, and it only gives a one-unit look to the two cupboards, but conceals a fluorescent tube which illuminates the bed and eliminates the need for lamps.

On each side, the cupboards provide shelves for books and decoratives and the base cabinets, 24 inches deep, house concealed storage which can be used for extra bedding or clothing.

In fact, when used for clothing, these cabinets could eliminate the need for any additional furniture.

A gemologist usually takes photos of your fine jewelry when appraising its value for insurance. You can take a leaf from his book and shoot several photos of each room in your home as proof of what you might lose in a fire or theft. It helps you remember each item. Spring decorating on your mind? Before you decide on the new, do-it-yourself fabric-backed foils, you should know that a foil looks best in a room with limited natural or artificial lighting. Too much lighting in a room causes an unpleasant glare from the foil.

And reflections from the shimmering walls will change colors of your draperies and other fabrics in the room.

If you don't have time to bother with the bones, let your electric slow-cooker simmer them while you're away from home.

Read the package description on the fluorescent tube you need before handing it to a salesperson. You'll like the warm white more than the cool white. The warmer light adds a cozier look to a kitchen or bathroom. (Did you know that one 40-watt fluorescent tube puts out the same amount of light as a 150-watt bulb? And for half the electricity.

So you drive a for-sale used car to your mechanic for a check-out and he says repairs are needed. Take the list of needed repairs back to the seller and you have a good bargaining point for a lower price for the car. But have your mechanic do the repairs; he's no stranger to you. That good advice comes from a retired used car dealer.

Prevent wallpaper paste problems: For lump-free paste, mix paste powder with an electric handmixer. Wipe all wet paste from papered walls and woodwork. Wet past on paper walls will show when it dries, and wet paste on woodwork can eat through the paint.

Spider mites can be a common wintertime problem for houseplants. You'll know mites are present if you see grey, dust-like spots on leaves. Then you must spray with a miticide (other insecticides don't seem to work) and treat both sides of leaves again in ten days.

To keep mites off your plants, wash both sides of leaves with a mild soapy water.

Why assume every one of the apples, oranges or onions in convenient-to-tote mesh bags are good? Once you get a bagful home, it's inconvenient to take only one bad apple back to the store for a refund. Be picky; don't buy pre-packaged produce unless you can see that every piece is in top condition.

Don't throw it out: A hardwood cutting board that's rough and smelly needs only a good sanding with the finest of sandpaper and a rubdown with dry baking soda. Rubbing oil into the seasoned wood only makes it smelly again.

Lumping Over-65s Together Unfair, Wasteful

Leslie Holbrook

"The longer people live, the more different they become," says Dr. Bernice Neugarten.

"Lives fan out with time as people develop their own patterns of interests, choices and commitments, their own turning points in life.

"One has only to attend a school or college reunion to recognize how much more different people have become at age 45, say, than they were at 20. By age 65 they will have become more different still."

Dr. Neugarten, professor of human development, University of Chicago, and member of U.S. Federal Council on Aging, was keynote speaker at the recent Winter Conference of the Couchiching Institute of Public Affairs, the theme of which was "The Young-Old . . . a New North American Phenomenon."

In past pieces I have argued that lumping together everyone over the age of 65 represents a great disservice to we seniors. It is encouraging to see a growing recognition of the unfairness, wastefulness and stupidity of such generalizations.

Neugarten puts it this way: "The lengthening life cycle has lead to appearance of what I have named the young-old, as distinguished from the old-old.

"The young-old seek meaningful ways to use their time. Some want to work, some seek self-fulfilment through education or through various types of leisure, some seek new ways of serving their communities.

"While most of these young-old are in their late 50s, 60s and 70s, and while most of the old-old are in their late 70s, 80s and 90s, it is not age which is the relevant factor. Some 80-year-olds are more vigorous and youthful than some 60-year-olds.

"And it does not help much in predicting a person's health or marital status or economic status or interests or life style to know that he or she is 60 rather than 50 or 70 rather than 60.

"That is what gerontologists mean when they say that in the second half of life — just as is true throughout the whole long period of adulthood — age is a poor predicator of performance."

Neugarten believes we are moving toward an age-irrelevant society as we become accustomed to such things as the 70-year-old student, the 30-year-old college president, the 65-year-old father of a pre-schooler, a 22-year-old elected politician and an 80-year-old businessman still going strong.

"The age of retirement is becoming more blurred," she says, "as people retire from one job, take on another, then retire again; or who phase out their work lives gradually, moving from full-time to part-time employment. Retirement is not such a clear-cut transition as we formerly considered it."

To adjust to this changing scene, new kinds of work arrangements are needed. There should be more part-time jobs, flexible working hours and days, improved working conditions, phased retirement and so on, to create not a longer work life for everybody but greater options for all.

We should ignore age differences wherever practicable and focus on more relevant dimensions of human differences. Age is not an important factor in most activities.

Rabbit Starts But Falters

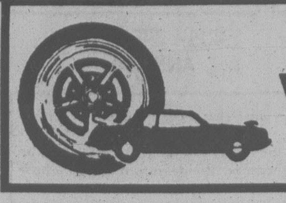
By MICHAEL LAMM



DEAR MIKE: Here's a lulu for you. My 1976 VW Rabbit starts readily on the coldest mornings, but out on the highway the engine stalls. It seems to be starving for gas. It loses power, slows down, and finally quits. Yet it always starts right back up again. The car can go different distances between these spasms — sometimes 50 miles, sometimes only five. My dealer has changed the fuel filter and pump and has blown out the gas lines. He hasn't tested the carburetor because he doesn't feel that's the problem. What do you say? — STALLING AROUND

DEAR STALLING: I say check the carburetor for foating debris in the bowl. Also check the gas tank for the same.

DEAR MIKE: For the past several months, I've smelled a noxious engine odor inside my 1971 Le Sabre. It comes into the car through the heater vent underneath the dashboard. I've had the exhaust system checked for leaks, and the heater box as well. No one has been able to trace the problem. Hope you can help me. — FUMED OUT

DEAR FUMED: Often blow-by (oil fumes) escapes from the engine. Then, if the car has hidden windshield wipers and if the rubber gasket at the rear lip of the hood is bad, these fumes make their way into the air intake for the ventilation system. I suspect that's what's happened in your case. My suggestions are: (1) Check your PVC valve and its connections to be sure blow-by fumes are being carried back into your intake mafifold; (2) Check your hood lip seal to be sure there's no underhood air entering your ventilation system.

DEAR MIKE: Could you please dispel a source of frustration for new-car shoppers like me? A number of dealers now offer various car-finish treatments that are supposed to penetrate the paint and give a three-year polish. The dealer adds $150-$200 to the delivered price of the car, and in some cases you get no choice — it's already there when you check the sticker. My question is, does this stuff really work, and is it worth the rather stiff price? — GLASSY EYED

DEAR GLASSY: I've seen these dealer-applied coatings and glazes advertised, but I've had no experience with them. Could readers who've bought cars with these paint treatments please write me and give me their opinions and experiences? I'll pass the word along in a future column.

Please send your automotive questions to On Wheels, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 85207. Owing to the volume of mail, not all letters can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest appear in columns.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I just lost the only man I ever loved. When I came home last evening I found a note from Jimmy saying, "Goodbye" — after we lived together for a year.

In his note he said that my job was changing me into a hard person, and he couldn't ask me to quit because he thought it was what I really wanted to do. (It's not true. I hate my work, but the money is too good to pass up.)

Abby, I am a prostitute. The money helped pay our bills. Jimmy's job didn't pay much, and we needed the bread.

I know there will never be another man in my life like Jimmy. He loved the real me — not just my body.

Should I quit my profession and go after him? I know he still loves me.

Please don't say where this letter is from. My father is a minister and my folks don't know what I do for a living.

— WORKING GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Quit your job and go after him. Jesus forgave a woman in your profession. Could Jimmy do less?

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to SPARKLING, who feels that her engagement ring is "on loan," disturbed me. (The ring was purchased by her fiance's mother and given to her with the understanding that in the event of a divorce, it would be returned.)

Abby, a marriage that begins by working out a possible divorce settlement doesn't sound like it has too much going for it. And returning Mama's ring — as you suggest — just might speed up a split.

I say SPARKLING should keep the ring. It, like her husband, now belongs to her — not Mama. — LAURIE

DEAR LAURIE: A marriage with the divorce settlement worked out in advance is sometimes preferable to one without, should the couple split. (And today, one in three do.) I still think since SPARKLING feels that her engagement ring is "on loan" she should return it and do without until her husband can buy her one.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from the woman who was disgusted with stupid TV commercials: She asked, "What ever happened to those wonderful free samples companies used to send out to acquaint people with their products?"

Well, I know what happened to several cases of free samples that should have been delivered but weren't.

They were taken home and kept in the family

— DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: If you are absolutely sure of your facts, the person responsible for delivering those free samples should be reported.

DEAR ABBY: Do you happen to know what the Alcoholics Anonymous credo is? It starts, "Oh, God, grant me the ability to accept the things I cannot change . . ."

— DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, Courage to change the things I can, And wisdom to know the difference.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for turning me on to what I consider the best place for a young man to met a nice young woman. In church!

I wrote to several local churches, asking if they sponsored any social groups for young adults. The response was amazing. Within a month I had become involved in three different groups — Lutheran, Methodist and Nazarene — all interesting and well-attended.

Now my evenings are filled with a variety of activities — potluck dinners, dances, bible studies, to name a few. I have met several eligible, intelligent and beautiful young women. (And they're not prudes, either.)

For every lonely man reading this, there are probably two lonely women wishing they could meet him. No more singles bars for me. I've got all I can handle now. In case you're wondeing, I'm a 27-year-old physician.

DOC

DEAR DOC: Your prescription will send a lot of people to church. (Especially those who never had a prayer.)

Psychics generally lose more points than they gain, but occasionally they produce a sensational triumph. This famous hand features a successful psychic by Harold Ogust in the U.S.-Great Britain match in 1960.

Ogust was North and was playing with Howard Schenken against Britain's Terence Reese and Boris Schapiro. Schenken bid one heart and Schapiro overcalled two clubs.

At this point Ogust made the highly irregular bid of two notrump, deliberately suppressing his marvelous trump support for partner in order to create the impression that he had an everyday notrump type of hand.

Reese, gazing at his misfit in clubs, elected to pass, and Schenken — unaware of the true nature of Ogust's two notrump bid — raised his partner to three notrump. Schapiro, his eye on the vulnerability, now bid four clubs, knowing that he could not be seriously hurt with his eight-card suit.

Ogust then bid four hearts. Reese, having been silent up to this point, doubled — partly on his two aces and partly because Schapiro had contracted for ten tricks all by himself. Everybody passed and Schenken made the contract with an overtrick.

Ogust obviously took the opponents by surprise. Moreover, his strategy proved to be phenomenally successful when later analysis revealed that East-West could have made a grand slam in spades against any defense!

The British pair must have done something wrong. Maybe East should have bid three spades over two notrump, or four spades over four hearts. Or maybe West should have bid for spades over four hearts doubled.

But regardless of who at fault, there is no doubt that Ogust's two notrump bid was magnificently timed. Measured by the outcome, his psychic was a scintillating success.

The boys had slipped into the house and up to their room without being seen. "Did you spend all your 20 bucks?" Doug asked.

"All except this," Ron replied, showing his brother a few coins. "And all on Mom and Dad, but his gift was just double hers."

"Well, I spent $2.50 more on Mom than on Dad," said Doug. "So together we spent $1 more on him than on her."

How much has Ron spent on his parents?

MO-PED

MO as in motor
PED as in pedal

Its like a strong bicycle that goes by itself. Its got pedals when you want them, a motor when you need it.

There are no oil levels to check, no clutch or gearshift to operate. If you can ride a bicycle, you can ride a Mo-Ped even better.

To enjoy the fun and economy of 200 + m.p.g. in B.C. you only need a regular driver's license or learner's permit (not Class 6), basic insurance, registration and license plate, $48. (Add $22 if under 25), a lightweight, comfortable helmet and a

309 IN MEMORIAM

HOLLAND — In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles E. Holland, who passed away on March 2, 1977.

It broke our hearts to lose you
You did not go alone
For part of us went with you
The day God called you home.

There is no parting from those we love
No distance can divide
For each day in memory's garden
We will walk side by side.

There is someone who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.

Gone is the face we loved so dear
Silent the voice we loved to hear
'Tis sad, but true, I wonder why
The best are always the first to die.

What you are is God's gift to you
What you make of yourself is your gift to God.

Praise the Lord

RUSSELL, Leslie Eyles — Fond and cherished memories of my very dear Son "Les" called Home March 5th, 1977.

Temple Survivors Sue for Cult Cash

The papers in the High Court suit, made public Saturday by government-owned Radio Demerara, were filed by Rex McKay, the same attorney who is defending Temple members Larry Layton and Charles E. Beikman on murder charges.

The suit mentioned no figure for the assets of the cult still in Guyana, but they are believed to be well over $2 million.

Two weeks ago, the Guyana government filed suit in the High Court, getting an order to restrain three Guyana banks and two Temple survivors fcom disposing of any Temple funds left in the three accounts.

The U.S. government is trying to get its money back from the sect for the shot-up aircraft chartered by the late Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., on his ill-fated investigative mission to the jungle commune, as well as for the costs incurred in "abating a public nuisance," as the cleanup of the 913 bodies after the mass murder-suicides last Nov. 18 was called in legal documents.

The suit by the eight survivors, including the Temple leader Rev. Jim Jones' son, Stephan Jones, 19, who left Guyana last week, also names the three Guyana banks as defendants in the bid to get at the sect's bank accounts.

The petitioners, including Paula Adams and Deborah Touchette who were named as defendants in the government suit, are trying to get a ruling from the court that the affairs of the "church" should be wound up and that they, as the "surviving and remaining" members, should share in all its assets.

They say that the eight survivors include three members of the Board of Directors of the People's Temple who are entitled to make all decisions for the sect.

Beikman, the sect's illiterate 45-year-old shoemaker from Indianapolis, is charged with the butcherknife killings in Georgetown of Temple spokeswoman Sharon Amos and her three children and is scheduled to come to trial in April.

Layton and Beikman are in jail and unable to get bail because murder is a capital charge in Guyana. Jones Jr. was earlier acquitted of murder charges in the Amos killings and no criminal charges are pending against any of the other survivors.

Maldivian Chief's Son Swapped for Americans

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — An oceanographic research ship arrived in the Maldive Islands Sunday to exchange the son of an Maldivian chieftain for three American crewmen held in the Indian Ocean archipelago since Feb. 17.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Sri Lanka said the Alyssem Maru with the chief's son, identified as Ahamed Mujuthaba, aboard docked at the Maldivian capital of Male after a voyage from the U.S. naval base in Diego Garcia once assurance was received the vessel would not be seized nor its crewmembers arrested.

But the spokesman said there was no immediate word on whether the exchange had taken place as scheduled.

The Americans were Capt. Kenneth Leonard of Winter Park, Fla., First Mate Craig Williams and medical officer Thomas Weikmen of Charleston, S.C.

They had been held under "informal house arrest" since they went ashore at Male Feb. 17. The local government contended the Americans were in Maldivian waters illegally.

The Americans said Maldivian natives armed with spears and machetes stormed the vessel, looting, robbing and vandalizing the ship and that when the Americans went ashore to protest, they were arrested.

The chief's son was seized as a hostage when the research vessel sailed without the three crewmen to Diego Garcia, south of the Maldive Islands, for repairs.

Hotel Burned

NASSAU, Bahamas (Reuter) — Fire roared through the 425-room government-owned Emerald Beach Hotel in the Bahamas on Saturday, destroying an entire wing, its lobby, nightclub, restaurant and several tourist shops.

Hotel officials said about 700 tourists were staying at the hotel but that no one was injured in the blaze which took firemen three-and-one-half hours to bring under control.

By nightfall, firemen still were pouring water on the smouldering ruins.

Cyclone Wanders

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Kerry, the longest surviving and most erratic cyclone recorded in Australia, turned in its tracks Sunday and headed toward the North Queensland coast, which was still recovering from its first blow four days ago.

Kerry, which formed Feb. 15 in the Solomon Island, meandered 2,400 miles across the South Pacfic, completing two circles, three u-turns, crossed the coast once, was demoted to a low depression when it moved out to sea again and then reinstated to a full cyclone with winds reaching 127 mph.

Police reported Sunday that towns and holiday resorts over a vast area of central and Northern Queensland were battened down as the cyclone turned back 95 miles east of Tonwnsville and appeared set to return to hit the coast where last Thursday it caused more than $100 million in damage.

Nasturtiums: Start Indoors?

Nasturtiums used to be one of the summer plants so easy to grow that small children were given the seeds to sow. Here in Victoria we hear of failures — all green plants and no flowers; or growth so slow that only a few flowers open before the first September frost.

Thinking about this strange case of failure with nasturtiums has made me wonder if we should try starting the seeds indoors in time to catch the first warm weather outdoors.

Nasturtiums are native to South America, some coming from Peru. Heat and bright light are needed for growth, but continual direct sunlight is not essential so long as warm air is present. If we are wanting a brilliant early display of color from these tropical plants, we can start seeds in small size milk cans, two-inch rigid plastic plant tops, or in styro drinking cups. Recycle those that have been used in the home.

These sizes should be large enough for a good root system and a nice sized sturdy plant in each. Sow two seeds in each of these containers. If you feel adventurous, leave in the two sprouted seedlings if both appear healthy. If one is obviously weaker, discard in favor of the stronger.

Watering will need careful control, for stems and leaves of nasturtiums are succulent, that is, they contain a high percentage of water. If too much additional is in the soil, the plant cells rupture, the plant wilts and dies. The loam, or humus, in the soil will hold a constant moderate supply of moisture without excluding the necessary air by becoming waterlogged.

Seeds of single varieties germinate in one week; doubles take two weeks. The Gleam hybrids which are semi double and sweet scented as well as having a wider range of color, come into the latter group for germination. These are the bushy kinds so suitable for container growing.

Set the containers in a soil gets warmth but does not dry out. Perhaps an egg carton will be suitable for the germinating period. It can be slipped into a large polythene bag to prevent rapid drying of soil until after germination. When roots are almost filling the small amount of soil in each section, transplant each unit without disturbance into the larger containers — two-inch plastic pots, small size milk cans, or the drinking cups.

Supposing that nasturtiums take five to six weeks of indoor growing before going out by about third week of May, I am planning to sow indoors just about April first.

The final two or three weeks the little plants should be gradually hardened-off by putting them out in their containers (all set on a tray or in a flat for convenience) whenever days are mild and sunny, or in a gentle mild rain. This will prevent weakness due to continued poor light indoors and too steady warmth.

Nasturtiums have a great future in today's hanging container gardening schemes. They would be gorgeous with their color and perfume on balconies, sundecks and patios.

Flower and leaf are used as salad decoration and for their refreshing spiciness; the seed pods have been added to pickles in place of capers.

Comox 'Copter Helps Locate Missing Teens

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Two 18-year-old youths who failed to return home after an overnight camping trip on Mount Seymour were found safe this morning.

RCMP said a helicopter from CFB Comox on Vancouver Island joined in the search of the mountain located on Vancouver's north shore.

Answer to Friday's puzzle.

12 Seal Hunt Foes Jailed

The Greenpeacers, four of them in two inflatable boats and the rest on shore, attempted to disrupt the sailing by chaining themselves to various parts of the vessels and by getting in the way of the ships.

Some members of a crowd estimated by police at 4,000 who had gathered on the waterfront to take part in the ecumenical blessing of the fleet, shouted insults at the Greenpeacers as police went into action.

Capt. Morrisey Johnson of the Lady Johnson Two personally pushed Greenpeacer Annie Linton of Boston down his ship's gangway after she tried to chain herself to a stanchion. Premier Frank Moores, who was standing on the deck after taking part in the ceremony, laid hands on the woman at one point.

One Greenpeace member jumped into the harbor from the wharf and another went overboard from an inflatable boat. The two tried unsuccessfully to chain themselves to a ship's rudder.

Three others, one aboard the Lady Johnson Two and two who boarded the Arctic Explorer chained themselves to rails but were cut loose by police.

One Greenpeace member in an inflatable boat was nabbed by two coastguardsmen in another rubber boat after the propeller of his outboard motor was put out of action when it struck a floating object. Two in the other Greenpeace inflatable circled around the Arctic Explorer but could not stop her leaving. They were arrested later when they came ashore.

David Gibbons, a Greenpeace lawyer, said six men and six women were arrested. He said six of the 12 were being charged with causing a disturbance and the other six likely would be charged under the National Harbors Board Act.

Anglican Rift Widens Over Ordaining Gays

TORONTO (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada is facing what could be an unprecedented rift in this century over the disclosure last week that their bishops have approved ordaining admitted homosexuals to the priesthood.

The bishops' stipulation that such priests promise to abstain from homosexual acts was apparently not enough to blunt the shock and outrage felt by some of the church's 1.5 million members.

The homosexual issue has caused distress among church-goers, said Canon Arthur Thompson, rector of Winnipeg's Anglican church, St. George's, where many of the city's corporate elite kneel to pray.

"This is the last straw and it couldn't have come at a worst time," said Rev. Thompson. "It could split the whole church wide open as it has already done in the American Episcopal Church."

Many Anglicans see homosexuality as the single explosive issue which could rend them as it already has some of the larger denominations in the United States.

"It will empty churches and split the church," said Anglican Deaconess Marion Featherstonehall-Morris.

"If you ask me if our people are ready for this, I'd have to say no, they're not," said Rt. Rev. Lewis S. Garnsworthy, Anglican Bishop of Toronto.

The bishops' recommendation came in the course of a discussion of a report by the church's study group on human sexuality. Most Rev. Edward W. Scott, the primate of the church, said the decision results from recognition by the bishops that homosexuality is a reality and that the church needs to be more open about issues.

"The silly bastards can discuss all that stuff if they want but they should have kept quiet about it," said Rt. Rev. Hugh Stiff, Dean of St. James Cathedral. "Bishops have ordained gay men for a long time, but only if they are committed to act responsibly."

Other church officials said the bishops should have informed their congregations of the decision before it became public knowledge.

Many church members were concerned about what they perceived to be a hypocrisy on the recommendation — accepting homosexuals for ordination but prohibiting their sexual practice.

"Asking them to remain celibate is like asking them to cut off an arm," said Canon George Young of St. Anne's Church in Toronto. "If you're going to allow it, you can't put in any stupid clause like that."

Project Funds Jobless

FREDERICTON (CP) — More than 100 unemployed New Brunswickers are going to be paid $625,000 from unemployment insurance funds during the next year to help develop the provincial tourism industry.

The agreement establishing the project, the first in Canada to use unemployment insurance benefits to create work, was signed today by federal Employment Minister Bud Cullen, New Brunswick Labor Minister Mabel DeWare and Tourism Minister Leland McGaw.

The project will operate in 10 communities. Among other things, it will survey residents and tourists, provide a toll-free telephone enquiry service, distribute literature and clean up parks, rest areas and scenic routes.

No 737 Crash If Study Used?

TORONTO (UPC) — A Toronto newspaper says eight months before a plane crash at Cranbrook, the federal government was given recommendations that might have helped prevent the disaster that killed 43 people.

The Toronto Sun reported in its Sunday edition a June, 1976, internal Transport Canada study urged swift action be implemented for safer air traffic control procedures at airports without control towers, particularly in western Canada.

The study was conducted by a three-man committee of Transport Canada officials, headed by Douglas E. McDonell, the Sun said.

A coroner's inquest into the 1977 crash was told a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 flew in early at the uncontrolled airport and while attempting to avoid a snowblower on the runway crashed taking the lives of 43 passengers.

The Sun quoted Conservative air transport critic Don Mazankowski as saying: "If (Transport Minister) Otto Lang and his department had acted on that report, the conditions that caused the Cranbrook crash would not have existed — the pilot would have been required to radio ahead to the Cranbrook ground radio operator before landing and ask for conditions."

McDonell was quoted as saying: "I'd like to tell the whole thing, but that's an internal government memorandum — where did you get it?"

The Sun said the study recommended the "establishment of a Traffic Advisory Service Area within 20 nautical miles of airports without control towers.

"An aircraft inbound from an airport with a control tower operation would be required to radio the destination airport 15 minutes prior to the estimated time of arrival."

Envoy Seeks Reform

WINNIPEG (CP) — The existing international economic system is rigged against Third World countries, says William Barton, Canadian ambassador to the United Nations.

The problem is finding a way to change that system — a task made more difficult by the UN charter, Barton said Sunday.

Here on the first leg of a Western Canadian speaking tour, Barton said the charter, written after the Second World War by countries preoccupied with peace, does not address itself to the problems of developing countries.

"There are now 151 members in the United Nations, of which about 120 are very poor. It's not that they support fighting, they just have different concerns."

Cancer Data Better

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The rate of cancer in America is still increasing, but there is an encouraging drop in incidence and mortality among those under 45, a federal researcher told Congress Monday.

Increasing mortality from cancer among older Americans is "swamping the decrease in younger people" of cancer deaths, said Marvin Schneiderman, a statistician with the National Cancer Institute.

Mortality rates for lung, breast, bladder, pancreas and skin cancers are increasing, he said, while the death rate for stomach, rectal and cervical cancer is declining sharply.

Better diet may be a cause for the drop in stomach cancer mortality.

If lung cancer deaths caused by smoking — 85 per cent of all of them — were removed from the statistical sample, cancer mortality would be declining, Schneiderman told the Senate health subcommittee.

The lower mortality rates for young people — those under 45 — are attributable to reduced incidence of breast cancer in younger women, lung cancer in young men and leukemia and Hodgkin's disease in children.

Yalden Finds Rights Issue Depressing

MONTREAL (UPC) — Official Languages Commissioner Max Yalden says he is "basically pessimistic" about the future of minority rights in Canada because there is an absence of leadership on the issue.

Yalden said Sunday since he was appointed as commissioner 18 months ago he had been "profoundly pleased and profoundly depressed by the activities of the premiers," but now "some of them are into so intricate a dance when it comes to minority rights that everyone's confused."

"I basically remain a pessimist about the future of minority rights in Canada," he told Concordia University during a panel discussion on the role of the state in Canadian society.

"Provincial premiers, for instance, should exercise more leadership on the question of minority language rights," Yalden said, adding that municipal and educational leaders should also "excercise responsible leadership" and get involved in the debate.

"Those who govern the lives of our universities are interested in one thing only, and that is finding more warm bodies willing to go to school so they can ask for more provincial grants," he said.

"They're not interested in asking themselves whether French or English should be required."

C of C Official Defends Profit

TORONTO (CP) — David Braide, chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said today politicians are again playing the traditional game of taking profit increases out of perspective to make businessmen appear villains.

Calling for businessmen not to remain silent in the face of an attack on profits, he said the usual simplistic connections are being made between increased profits and higher prices.

In a speech to The Canadian Club, he said profit figures mean little unless time is taken to interpret them.

Defending profits, he said dollar figures on profit are meaningless if they are not related to the capital base needed to produce them.

Despite the myth, he said profits are not divided up and distributed to owners of a company, or the "pay cheque of the rich."

They are used to pay taxes, build new factories, modernize old ones and create jobs. Only 25 per cent of after-tax profits goes to shareholders whom he said are not simply a group of idle rich, but small investors as well.

High Court Backs Alimony for Men

WASHINGTON (AP) — State laws which provide alimony payments only for women create unconstitutional sex discrimination, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 6-to-3 vote, the justices struck down an Alabama law which required husbands, but never wives, to pay alimony.

Similar laws are on the books in 10 other states: Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nevada, New York, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee and Wyoming.

Noting that Alabama law provides for hearings in individual divorce cases to decide which spouse, if any, is financially dependent on the other, the high court said: "There is no reason, therefore, to use sex as a proxy for need."

Justice William Brennan Jr., writing for the majority, said the Alabama law violates men's constitutional right to equal protection.

Brennan said the state law "carries with it the baggage of sexual stereotypes" — that a woman's place is in the home and a man's place is in the marketplace and world of ideas.

William Orr, now a resident of San Francisco, where he is president of the Orrox Corp., challenged the Alabama law after he and his wife, Lilian, were divorced in 1971.

Rail Pact Attacked

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — The chairman of the rail workers union in this southern British Columbia city said today he will recommend that union members reject a contract worked out last week to cover Canada's 20,000 rail workers.

"The economy is too unstable."

Times News Services

Western oil companies are being accused by Middle East countries of profiting from the unstable world oil market caused by the Iranian revolution.

Ali Jaidah, Qatar's chief delegate to the Arab energy conference here, joined Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates today in saying: "The oil companies are definitely making hefty profits. We are definitely unhappy about the situation.

"It is about time the situation was rectified."

UAE Petroleum Minister Mana al-Oteiba accused oil companies Sunday of "ugly exploitation" of the market situation caused by the political upheaval in Iran and said he would suggest they be blacklisted if they persisted.

Kuwait's oil minister, Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, supported this position and urged the oil companies to heed the warning.

Jaidah said the industrialized countries should check the companies which are reaping windfall profits.

Oil officials in Abu Dhabi said OPEC might consider eliminating oil companies as middle men and sign direct contracts with governments.

The officials added that oil companies were taking advantage of high spot market prices to sell oil bought in the Persian Gulf under OPEC contracts at sharply higher prices, these officials said.

Iran resumed oil exports today for the first time in three months.

A spokesman for the National Iranian Oil Co. said the tanker World Ambassador started loading 110,000 tons of light crude and 140,000 tons of heavy crude for the Mitsui Trading Co. of Japan at the Kharg Island terminal in the Persian Gulf.

It is the first shipment of crude oil for export since December when the oil industry's 65,000 workers went on srike.

Another tanker was scheduled to arrive at Kharg Island on Wednesday to load crude for Ashland Oil, an U.S. company.

The new government has said it will not restore the previous export level of 5.4 million barrels a day because it wants to conserve the oil reserves for the future.

Road Crashes Take 3 Lives

Three Greater Victoria residents were killed and four other people were hospitalized in two separate traffic accidents over the weekend.

At 2 p.m. Saturday Eduardo De Amaral, 19, of 866 Carey Rd., and Sheryl Kowalchuk, 17, of 135 Bute, View Royal, died in a two car collision on the Malahat.

The accident occured near the summit about 32 kilometres north of Victoria.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the car carrying the two youths skidded out of control on the wet pavement and collided with a south-bound pick-up truck.

In another crash at about midnight Sunday a 33-year-old Victoria man was killed, his wife and two others were hospitalized when three cars collided on the Pat Bay highway near Elk Lake.

Saanich police today declined to release the names of any of those involved in the crash, pending notification of next of kin.

Police said the wife of the man who was fatally injured is under emergency care and has not yet been told of her husband's death.

Carter Heading For Middle East

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will fly to the Middle East on Wednesday in an effort to salvage the negotiations for a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, the White House announced today.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said Carter will arrive in Egypt on Thursday afternoon for talks with President Anwar Sadat and will procede to Israel on Saturday evening for talks with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

A U.S. official who asked not to be identified said that at this point there are no plans for a three-way meeting among the leaders. The official said he does not know when Carter will return to the United States.

The announcement of the trip came shortly after Begin told Carter at a surprise White House meeting that the Israeli cabinet had responded positively to U.S. suggestions for resolving some of the remaining obstacles to the peace treaty.

The announcement of Carter's travel plans said his talks in Egypt and Israel "will focus on the peace process, regional security and bilateral issues."

The U.S. official said Carter believes his travels will "offer the best hope for success" in his months-long effort to promote an Israeli-Egyptian agreement.

The White House announcement said:

"The president believes that we must not allow the prospects for peace, which seemed so bright last September to continue to dim and perhaps to vanish. If we do, the judgment of history and of our children will rightly condemn us."

Before Carter's trip was announced, Powell emphasized that "difficult issues remain." He said "the next step in the peace process is still under discussion."

Carter's secret proposals to try to salvage faltering peace hopes stirred interest in Israel and optimistic reports in that country's press.

Summoned to join the president for his brief morning meeting with Begin were U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance, presidential advisers Zbigniew Brzezinski and Hamilton Jordan and Powell.

"The Israeli government has responded positively to American suggestions on ways to help resolve some of the remaining differences" between Israel and Egypt, Powell said in a statement.

"However, it is important to understand that difficult issues remain. The next step in the peace process is still under discussion."

In Cairo, meanwhile, Egyptian officials said President Sadat spoke by telephone with Carter today and would decide within 48 hours whether to go to Washington.

The surprise development appeared to buoy the hopes of U.S. officials who had expressed no optimism Sunday in announcing the American move.

But even then they emphasized that the U.S. suggestions dealt with only some of the remaining obstacles to completion of the long-elusive peace treaty.

"I'm sure that it's going to contribute to the process of the negotiations," Israeli Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin told reporters after the cabinet meeting in Jerusalem. He made clear he was referring to Begin's recommendations and not Carter's proposals.

Libya Backs Amin in War With Tanzania

NAIROBI (UPI) — Libya has airlifted 1,000 troops and military supplies to Uganda in a major effort to prop up President Idi Amin's beleaguered government, authoritative diplomatic sources said today.

Americans and Europeans living in Uganda were urged to leave the country as quickly as possible because of the deteriorating situation.

The magnitude of the Libyan airlift, which was continuing today, indicated that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy is giving Amin his all-out support.

The sources said Khadafy's backing may tip the scales in Amin's favor in the 4-month-old war with Tanzania.

"Two weeks ago I would have said Amin is finished," one source said. "But the apparent decision by Libya to support Amin unconditionally changes the balance of power completely."

According to the sources, Libyans have no great affection for Amin but feel that because he is a Muslim, Uganda can be considered a Muslim country and will lean toward the Arab world.

Tanzanian forces were said to be advancing along a road from the southern town of Masaka toward Kampala, but Western diplomats in Nairobi said it was unclear how deeply they had advanced.

The West German Embassy in Kampala, which represents U.S. interests in Uganda, strongly recommended that all Americans and West Europeans leave immediately.

There are now about 130 Americans, mostly missionaries, living in Uganda. Many of them already have indicated they intend to stay despite the dangers.

Diplomatic sources said giant Libyan Air Force transports have been ferrying combat troops to the Ugandan capital of Kampala for the past 10 days.

China Ends 'Lesson' Begins Withdrawal

BANGKOK (AP) — China announced today it has begun withdrawing its troops from Vietnam, 16 days after they struck across the border to "teach" Hanoi a bloody military "lesson."

Peking's official news agency said the invasion force is being pulled out "after achieving the goals assigned them." But Vietnam called the Chinese attack a failure. It was reported to have cost the lives of thousands on both sides.

The Japanese news service Kyodo said in a dispatch from Peking that the government announced all Chinese troops are being withdrawn.

The announcement by China's Xinhua (Hsinhua) agency warned however, that "the Chinese side reserves the right to strike back again in self-defence" if Vietnam resumes the border "provocations and incursions" that China said forced it to launch its "self-defence" invasion Feb. 17.

The announcement added: "The Chinese government proposes once again that the Chinese and Vietnamese sides speedily hold negotiations to discuss ways of ensuring peace and tranquility between the two countries and then proceed to settle the boundary and territorial disputes."

It also called on the rest of the world to "take measures to urge the Vietnamese authorities to stop promptly their aggression against Kampuchea (Cambodia) and withdraw all their forces of invasion."

A radio commentary by the Voice of Vietnam, broadcast at about the same time as the Chinese withdrawal statement, said Peking's leaders had "failed in their large-scale invasion to teach Vietnam a lesson and could not fulfil their expansionist aims."

A Hanoi summary of the war said 10 per cent of the Chinese invasion force was killed or wounded and half the tanks and armored vehicles were destroyed. It said the bodies of Chinese officers only were taken back to China from Vietnam and it took hundreds of trucks to transport the bodies.

The latest summary gave no figures but a report Sunday claimed the Vietnamese had killed or wounded almost 42,000 Chinese, a figure western analysts consider inflated. Vietnamese casualty figures have not been reported and China issued no casualty reports.

Another Two Firebombings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men were to appear in court here today on firebombing charges as police were investigating two more attacks in the Vancouver area and two weekend incidents in the Fraser Valley community of Chilliwack.

The two firebombing incidents early Monday — one at a downtown bank and the other at a West Vancouver school — brought to 19 the number of attacks in the past 10 weeks.

Police said a bottle filled with gasoline was tossed through the window of the main Toronto-Dominion Bank branch at Georgia and Granville, the heart of Vancouver's downtown area. There was only minor damage, police said.

West Vancouver police were investigating the second firebombing attack in the last week on Gleneagles Community Elementary School. Several boys were spotted running from the school after the first attack last week.

RCMP in Chilliwack, about 90 kilometres east of here, were investigating two weekend attacks on the same supermarket.

Trudeaumania Reborn

By BARBARA CANSINO
Special to the Times

NEW YORK — A different time, a much different place, but it was Trudeaumania all over again.

Dozens of women, dozens of black-tied, frill-shirted men, were in New York Saturday night to see Prime Minister Trudeau — to gaze at him, smile at him, talk to him, photograph him, say they love him, dance with him. And a handful to taunt him.

Long before Trudeau arrived at Carnegie Hall for the Symphonicum Europae gala, they were there: the crowd which just wanted to look, and the crowd which wanted to shout. As the black limousine pulled up to the curb, crowds rushed in for the look. And the 50-strong protesters from the Greenpeace Foundation raised the pitch of their chant: "Boycott Canada! Save the Seals! Boycott Canada! Save the Seals!"

Trudeau, in black cape and top hat with a red rose in his lapel, stepped out of the car, flashed the big smile for the fans and photographers, paused a brief moment, then strode into Carnegie Hall. The fans crushed in behind him, and the pattern was set for the night.

During the concert opera glasses focused on and off Trudeau. Necks craned to box 59. Was he having a good time? Was he enjoying the concert? Apparently, yes.

He smiled during the performance, he blew a kiss to conductor Piero Gamba, he laughed out loud at Peter Ustinov and he smiled into the audience. One Winnipeg woman looked up to the box, gave a little wave, he waved back. She waved again, he waved back again.

At the reception after the gala, hosted by The Consul General of Canada, and attended by some 600 persons, Trudeau was the focus. He was besieged by photographers and women and high-ranking officials who introduced themselves or reintroduced themselves.

For an hour and a half they lined up, crushed in, said "You're so great," planted a kiss on his cheek if they could stretch their neck past the next neck. Gracious and friendly, he had a nice word and a smile for them all, inching from one room to the next.

Heather Martin, a University of Toronto economics student, went to the concert and reception because she wanted to see him and meet him. She was rewarded later when he asked her to dance.

After the party, the scene moved up the street to Regine's discotheque. Those who paid $250 for a ticket got to dine on tossed salad with

TORONTO (CP) — Mineral exploration in Western Canada is on the rise, the president of the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines says.

Donald K. Mustard, president of the 1,500-member association, said that spending on hard-rock mineral exploration in B.C. increased by 12.6 per cent or $25.6 million in 1978.

"We would expect that the kind of increase we have seen will continue," Mustard said. "The interesting thing to me now is that a number of companies are buying up properties or are taking things off the shelf and having another look at them."

While B.C. does have as much oil as Alberta, uranium as Saskatchewan, nickel as Ontario, asbestos as Quebec or iron ore as Labrador, the prospects in gold, tungsten, molybenum and uranium are also good, Mustard said.
